The Brains of Britain
Sitting on the Valve

—By Arthur Brisbane—

THE PRINCE OF WALES and Prime Minister Baldwin of Great Britain and therefore CHIEF THINKER for the British Empire are in Canada. Crowds welcome the two men, everywhere the Prince keeping himself in the background, putting Baldwin forward.

It's a great combination, all the British know it, to have great countries like Canada, Australia, South Africa inhabited and controlled by European blood, directed and held together by a thinking, highly intelligent group in that little European office of the British Empire, called "Great Britain."

It is good for the United States to have so good a neighbor and so swift a pacemaker as Canada on the North. We should like to see Mexico develop as Canada has developed and give us stronger competition on the South.

We want nothing that belongs to anybody else, and we don't let anybody take anything that belongs to us.

Eventually we shall have a government that will approve of spending money wisely for defense and preparation, as well as of saving it, unwisely, for no reason in particular. Then everything will be O. K.

Mario Chiossone came to America and, it is alleged, carried on agitation in this country against Italy's Fascist government. This government sent him back to Italy. Signor Chiossone wrote to the Secretary of Labor begging not to be sent back.

The Fascists he said would kill him for having opposed their theories here. They haven't killed him, but a Roman court sentences him to prison for twelve years, a severe sentence for talking, even for talking foolishly.

What Rome does to its Romans for talking against Mussolini in other countries is probably none of our business. But sending back men whose crimes are only political is something to think about.

The British have thought it over very seriously and don't do it. All sorts of queer people Communists, Socialists, Anarchists, Nihilists, may "talk their heads off," in England. England says, "talk all you like, but don't DO ANYTHING."

You don't read about Anarchist attacks on Royalty or high officials in Great Britain. There they know that talking is a safety valve.

We don't realize that in this country.

Our theory is that if you sit on the safety valve with all your weight everything will be all right.

CHAMBERLIN IN 120-MILE SHIP-TO-SHORE FLIGHT

Curtis Field, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Clarence Chamberlin, New York to Germany flier, landed at the flying field here today after demonstrating successfully the feasibility of taking off from a liner at sea.

Chamberlin hopped off from the S. S. Leviathan, below Fire Island, at 8:14 a. m. He flew a distance of 120 miles.

Chamberlin made the trip in one hour and 16 minutes. It was the first commercial ship-to-shore-hop in history.

Chamberlin had intended to fly to his home field in Teterboro, N. J., but due to heavy fog he decided to land here on Long Island. He later hopped off again for Teterboro when the fog had lifted.

He completed his flight by landing at Teterboro at 10:51 a. m.

MAKES SPEEDY TAKE-OFF

On arrival at Teterboro Chamberlin climbed from the plane and handed nine packages, three letters and a mail pouch to Joseph Kudlie, mail carrier from the Hasbrouck Heights postoffice.

"The whole plan is entirely practical," Chamberlin said later.

"I could just as well have carried passengers. I had no trouble taking off 'the flying bridge,' although there was a 14-mile breeze blowing. The Leviathan was about 35 or 40 miles beyond Fire Island when I hopped off."

He said he gained such speed on the runway that his plane took to the air about half-way down. It had been expected that the full length of the runway, with its flattened end, would be necessary to get the plain into the air successfully.

Montreal Wild for Wales

Montreal, Que., Aug. 1 (I.N.S.).—With panoply and pomp the Prince of Wales, Prince George and Premier Baldwin drove through the streets of Montreal today to receive a tremendous ovation from thousands who stood on the curbings and went into pandemonium.

Warm weather failed to suppress the ardor of the crowds, but the Prince of Wales took the precaution of cooling off before he started on the procession, for he slipped out of his hotel early this morning and went to the Central Y. M. C. A. for a swim in the pool.

The Prince, wearing the uniform of a Colonel of the Seaforth Highlanders, was escorted by a troop of dragoons in glittering steel helmets.

The Prince and his party were driven to the City Hall, where May-

John F. Grant, 55, for 27 years a clerk in the assessing department at City Hall, is dead at his home. Heart trouble caused death. He left his associates at noon Saturday apparently in the best of health. Mr. Grant leaves a widow and a brother, Rev. Fr. Grant of Ayer.

ENWRIGHT IS SENT TO STATE PRISON CAMP

Frederick W. Enwright, ublisher of the now defunct Boston Telegraph and Boston Telegram, who is serving an eight months' jail sentence for criminal libel, was today transferred from the Charles street jail to the state prison camp at Tewksbury.

Enwright entered the Charles street jail on April 11, following his conviction on a charge preferred by former Mayor James M. Curley.

Shortly after he was taken to the Charles street jail, Enwright's relatives appealed to Governor Fuller to have him transferred to the prison camp. No action was taken on this request at the time.

Sanford Bates, Commissioner of Corrections, today said the transfer to the prison camp was in line with the general policy of the State Prison authorities.

"When a man's term is about half served and he has a good record and wants to go to the prison camp, we generally transfer him, if it is possible," said Bates.

"Enwright's record is good, and he wanted to be transferred to the prison camp. His transfer was ordered in the regular rontine manner, and he will remain at the camp until he serves his term, or until he is paroled."

DEMAND AVIATION AID OF STATE LEGISLATURE

The tremendous interest aroused in the development of commercial aviation in Massachusetts in recent months was evinced at the State House today, when more than 75 men and women, representing all sections of the State, appeared before the special State commission on aviation investigating the needs of aviation.

Representatives of cities, towns and Chambers of Commerce told of an aroused public sentiment with more than a score of flying fields planned and awaiting legislative action to become realities.

Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers of Lowell was one of the principel speakers. She urged that the Legislature leave nothing undone to encourage development of flying fields in every section of the commonwealth.

The representatives of the cities and chambers of commerce agreed on

ROB SOMERVILLE SAFE; ERASE FINGER PRINTS

Sledge-hammer burglars knocked off the combination of the safe in the office of the Capitol Theatre, Broadway, Somerville, between Saturday night and early today, making away with $600 in cash. They also ransacked a ticket cabinet.

When the police arrived, Inspectors O'Connell and Fitzpatrick, in searching for fingerprints, found that the thieves had wiped off the safe with a wet towel. The break was discovered by the custodian, Thomas Bullock.

ILLNESS DUE TO FOOD STRIKE HALTS MOVING SACCO TO DEATH CELL

Nicola Sacco, on the sixteenth day of his hunger strike and facing death with Bartolomeo Vanzetti next week, unless Governor Fuller intervenes, is so weakened that he is confined to his cot at State Prison and officials are gravely alarmed.

Because of Sacco's condition, bordering on complete physical and mental collapse, the two condemned prisoners were not moved today, as planned, from the Cherry Hill "solitary" wing of the prison to the death house.

In his present quarters he can be treated more easily in case of emergency than in the narrow cell assigned to him in the death house, in the opinion of the prison authorities.

He is constantly under observation because attempts to learn how he is feeling by questioning meet only with sullen silence.

"Sacco is growing weaker hourly," reported Dr. Joseph I. McLaughlin, who visits him at regular intervals. "He has taken no exercise for several days. He sits in his cot—that's all."

POLICE RESERVES CALLED

Police reserves were called from Hanover street station today to hanadle a large crowd gathered about defence committee headquarters, attracted by the presence of Mrs. Sacco made known to them through the appearance of several camermen and motion picture photographers who were after her picture.

A woman representative of the agent in charage of the building tried to "shoo" the photographers away and then sent for the police as the crowd gathered. Captain McConnell, a sergeant, four plai nolothes policemen and five patrolmen in uniform responded and drove the crowd off the sidewalk into the street and held it in check.

The appearance of the police drew more persons to the scene and there was considerable excitement for a time, many thinking that there had been trouble at the Committee's headquarters.

Mrs. Sacco, who came from the prison, was much depressed and reported to the committee that her husband intended to continue his hunger strike until a decision was made and to continue it until the

MIGHT POSTPONE EXECUTION.

If Sacco should go insane after a mental collapse, due to his hunger strike, his execution, if decided upon, might have to be postponed for under the law insane persons are not put to death.

In 1923, while at Dedham Jail, Sacco fasted for thirty-one days and on the thirty-second was removed to the Psychopathic Hospital. He broke his fast but after observation was transferred to Bridgewater State Hospital for the Insane. After several months he was pronounced sane and returned to jail.

The law which would apply reads as follows: "If it appears to the satisfaction of the Governor and council that a convict under sentence of death has become insane, the Governor, with the advice and consent of the council, may, from time to time for stated periods, respite execution of said sentence until it appears to their satisfaction that the convict is no longer insane."

Everything was in readiness at the death house for the removal of Sacco, Vanzetti and Celestino Madeiros after breakfast time this morning and police were guarding the environs of the prison when the decision was reached to postpone taking the trio to the dread annex to the death chamber.

Vanzetti, who ended his hunger strike yesterday, ate a breakfast of bread, coffee and a cup of milk. At noon he had beans and brownbread and tea. He was cautioned by Warden Hendry to be careful and not to eat too much at first.

Mrs. Rose Sacco called to make her daily inquiries about her husband and his comrade, and she was met at the prison by Mrs. Elizabeth Glendower Evans and Mrs. Katherine B. Codman, sympathizers with the condemned men.

News of the enthusiastic, although orderly, meeting of 3,000 sympathizers on the Common was conveyed to both Sacco and Vanzetti, but the former displayed no interest whatever. Vanzetti was more interested in learning of the progress of Governor Fuller toward a decision.

The Governor repeated his promise to make known his finding Wednesday and firmly refused to discuss the case any further.

While putting nearly all his time on his report, Governor Fuller kept in touch with Massachusetts General Hospital where his son, Alvan, Jr., is convalescing steadily after an operation for appendicitis. The Governor was in good spirits at the favorable news from his son's bedside.

FULLER EARLY AT OFFICE.

The Governor arrived early at the State House, going there in a taxicab from a Back Bay hotel, where he spent the night. His personal counsel, Attorney Joseph Wiggin, and his secretary, Herman A. MacDonald, accompanied him.

"My boy is getting along fine," he said cheerfully in reply to questions. The three men went into conference in the executive office immediately.

Governor Fuller interviewed three officers of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defence Committee, Gardner Jackson, recording secretary, and A. Felicani, treasurer, told of the organization of the committee seven years ago and its work to date, besides expressing their own individual opinions about the case and the incidents of the trial.

They explained how the defense was financed, Jackson declaring that the committee had practically 100 per cent. support from labor and had received small contributions from millions of persons all over the world.

He denied that the committee was "wealthy," asserting that there was no person of "colossal wealth" supporting it and declaring that the organization had no funds now and had not made an appeal for funds for two years.

MORO INTERVIEWED.

Joseph Moro, secretary of the committee, was interviewed after the Governor had sent out for his lunch and eaten it in his office. Jackson and Felicini had been before him for more than an hour and a half.

Commissioner of Public Safety Alfred F. Foote denied a report that extra State police would be assigned to guard the State House.

Attorney William G. Thompson appeared at the office of the Governor this afternoon carrying a large envelope. He told reporters the envelope contained the original affidavits of Sacco and Vanzetti that he had borrowed from the Governor and he was simply returning them.

POLICE SEE HIM.

Two others waiting to see the Governor were Policemen Michael Connolly and Earl aughn of Brockton. Connolly arrested Vanzetti on a street car on May 5, 1920.

Another visitor to the State House was Attorney Herbert B. Ehrmann, acting as associate counsel with Thompson. He hurried in and after asking if Thompson was there, left as suddenly as he came.

Earlier in the afternoon a man whose name was said to be Pendleton was admitted to the Governor's office. When questioned by reporters, he declared "leave me out of this case as I have nothing to do with it and am not interested."

Another visitor to the Governor asserted his visit was purely personal.

Radiograms telling of protest meetings in Stockholm, Sweden, and Oslo, Norway, were received at Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee headquarters today. The first as folows:

"Protest meeting in Stockholm. Great protest meeting. George Branting principal speaker."

Branting came to Boston several months ago and made a study of the case, reaching the conclusion that the condemned men are innocent. He is a lawyer and son of a former premier of Sweden. The message from Norway was as follows:

"Entire Norwegian working class protest against execution of Sacco and Vanzetti and beg American workers to give all their energy for their freedom. Enthusiastic meeting."

AUTO LICENSE BY PROXY COSTS 2 $125 IN FINES

It costs two East Boston men a total of $125 in Brighton court today to attempt to get an automobile driver's license by proxy. They pleaded guilty. Frank Godbout, motor vehicle inspector, testified he discovered the substitution. Joseph Dello Russo of Maverick square was fined $75 for procuring false impersonation, and James S. Cimona of Decatur street $50 for false impersonation.

Sacco, Vanzetti to be Freed, Mrs. Evans Predicts

"Because Governor Fuller is a man whom nobody owns, I believe he will say Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent and that they shall go free."

This opinion was expressed today by Mrs. Elizabeth Glendower Evans of Wellington terrace, Brookline.

"The Governor has allowed the defense to make a full statement and on the facts I believe he will find they are innocent," she said.

"I should believe just the same of Governor Fuller in any case—that he is making his decision on the facts as he sees them."

Mrs. Evans has been visiting the wife of Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis at Chatham.

AIR ACE LINKS SHIP TO SHORE IN FLIGHT

Chamberlin's feat was an experiment to prove the practicability of combining steamship and airplane routes to expedite mail service and to some extent passenger travel.

DESTROYERS AS ESCORT.

The Leviathan, which sailed after midnight, was accompanied to sea by the destroyers Lawrence and Humphries, which steamed at full speed in Chamberlin's wake toward shore to offer speedy assistance if there should be an accident.

Up to the time of his take-off Chamberlin was kept informed at half-hour intervals of weather conditions over the course he would have to cover. The messages were sent from the Brooklyn Navy Yard by wireless.

The plan for the Leviathan and eventually other ships of the United States lines to employ airplanes was evolved by Commander Hartley of the liner and Chamberlin when Chamberlin recently returned from Europe on the Leviathan after flying to Germany with Charles A. Levine.

Chamberlin flew in a biplane loaned him by the Wright Aeronautical Company. It is driven by the same type of Wright whirlwind motor which carried him from New York to Germany in the monoplane Columbia.

When the Leviathan was in drydock at Boston last week the 118-foot runway was constructed above the top deck of the liner. From the end of the runway there was a 100-foot drop to the water.

Although the auxiliary airplane service to be inaugurated by the United States lines will eventually accommodate passengers who are in particular haste, it is intended primarily to expedite the mails.

It is estimated that as much as 48 hours may be cut from the present steaming time, thus reducing the transatlantic passage to three days instead of five. Chamberlin carried no passengers in his test flight today.

Bon Voyage as Flier Hops Off Big Liner

New York, Aug. 1 (A.P.).—A wireless message describing Clarence Chamberlin's successful inauguration of ship-to-shore airplane service was received by the United States lines today shortly after Chamberlin had landed at Curtiss Field.

"Inaugurating the ship-to-shore airplane service contemplated for all the vessels of the United States Lines fleet," the message read, "Clarence D. Chamberlin took off successfully from the Leviathan at 8:14, his plane leaving the runway about seventy-five feet from the point where he started. The successful take-off from the runway demonstrated that his theory of employing a runway in preference to catapault was logical.

"The plane rose gracefully from the runway, circled the Leviathan, and dipped in salute over each of the three destroyers standing nearby and after acknowleding the final salute from the Leviathan, Chamberlin headed for New York escorted by an airplane with cameramen and the Naval destroyers which were stationed near the vessel for his safety in case of accident. There was a light rain falling after a heavy squall which had delayed the take off one hour.

"When Mr. Chamberlin again appeared on the bridge he was joined by General A. C. Dalton and David G. Burke.

When Chamberlin went to the runway he was bade bon voyage. This is probably the first time that anyone has had the distinction of being wished bon voyage on the deck of a liner at sea, one of the many distinctions that Chamberlin has to his credit as a result of this and other successful flights.

"The Leviathan was proceeding due east at one half speed 100 miles off shore.

"At 7:30 it was raining hard and Chamberlin assisted the members of the Leviathan's crew in uncovering the plane. The sailors dried the runway while Mr. Chamberlin tuned up the motor. At 8 o'clock Captain Hartley presented Chamberlin with a sack of mail, which was chiefly mail from the company's and ship's officers. Orders were given to head the ship in the wind. The Leviathan's speed was increased to 24 knots, Chamberlin climbed into his seat, warmed up the motor and after a few moments with a tremendous road the plane started down the runway.

"The 1,700 passengers aboard he Leviathan were on deck to witness the hop-off. Just as Chamberlin started down the runway a rainbow appeared. Passengers cheered wildly and lined the port side of the ship as Chamberlin said goodbye to the Leviathan and started on his return trip."

OHIO GOVERNOR MOVES TO END OLD COAL TIEUP

Columbus, O., Aug. 1 (A.P.).—Conferring with Oral Daugherty, president of the Hocking Valley Union Miners, Governor Donahey today expressed fear dire trouble will occur in Ohio's coal fields unless the mines are opened within a few weeks.

It was indicated the governor has been considering a mediation plan whereby miners and operators will be called together to settle the dispute.

FOUND ARMED NEAR FULLER HOME; HELD

Leo Bass, giving his address as Milford, N. H., and who was found in the rear of Governor Fuller's Winter home on Beacon street with a loaded revolver in his possession, was held in $3,500 for a hearing a week from today when arraigned in municipal court.

Bass said he came to Boston to look for work and was without funds. According to the police, he was found on the Esplanade in the rear of the Fuller home and looking up at the windows. When searched by the police the revolver was found.

TRAFFIC OFFICER IS HIT BY TROLLEY CAR

After dodging thousands of automobiles that pass his station at Hancock street and Billings road, Quincy, Traffic Officer Alfred J. Cappellini was struck by an Eastern Massachusetts street railway car today. He was hurled against the rear mudguard of an automobile, wreckin the tail light.

The automobile proceeded on its way and the officer, although bruised, returned to duty.

Chicago, Aug. 1 (A.P.).—Mayor William Hale Thompson returned to Chicago today from the north woods of Wisconsin tired but in good health. PRISONER GOES TO FUNERAL OF MOTHER

A 22-year-old Worcester prisoner, serving an 8 to 10-year sentence for robbery in the State Prison at Charlestown, obtained several hours of liberty today when he went to that city to attend ne funeral of his mother.

The young man, who has served a little over two years of his sentence, was grief stricken when word was brought to him in his cell late at night yb Rev. Michael J. Murphy, the prison chaplain. The boy was summoned from his cell in the west wing and brought to the prison guardroom, where Fr. Murphy broke the news to him.

Tears rolled down the youth cheeks as Father Murphy attempted to cheer him up. He requested an opportunity for a last look at his mother and also to attend the services.

Father Murphy conveyed the message to Warden William Hendry, who quickly informed the youth that his civilian clothes would be ready and he could make the trip. So bright and early this morning, the young man in company with Prison Officer Daniel Griffin left the State Prison by taxi for the South Staton, where they boarded the train for Worcester.

U. S. Army to Scrap "Jenny" Planes at Training Fields

New York, Aug. 1 (I.N.S.).—Revolutionary changes are to be made by the U. S. Army Air Service at training fields.

The old type "Jenny" planes, in which Colonel Charles A Lindbergh and other noted airmen got their rudimentary training, is to be displaced.

The new type will be similar to a pursuit plane, but will have a slightly broader wing span. Two hundred old type machines, used in World War time, will be discarded by September 1.

An old abandoned automobile in a field off Auckland street, Dorchester, excited the curiosity of two boys, who investigated the gasoline tank with a match to see if there was any fuel in the machine.

In the explosion that followed, James O'Brien, 12, of No. 4 Day street, suffered painful burns of the hands and face. Thomas Holmes, aged 11, of No. 1148 Dorchester avenue, was burned about the hands.

Both were treated at the City Hospital, where the O'Brien boy was held for treatment.

Mrs. Pearl Fisher of Suffolk street, Malden, whose home was raided a few weeks ago by Federal agents, at a hearing today before U. S. Commissioner Bennett Sanderson, was held for the Grand Jury on evidence alleged to show an unusual consumption of gas for a two-family house.

Thomas F. Murphy, Federal liquor sleuth, testified an examination of gas bills paid by Mrs. Fisher disclosed a jump of from 75 cents for May, 1924, to $160 for last June.

Commissioner Sanderson decided that information was sufficient to show probable cause of liquor manufacturing in the still found in the attic, despite the contention of the defendant that the Federal agents had not proved her connection with the distillery.

AID FOR AVIATION DEMANDED FROM LEGISLATURE

one point—that the Legislature must adopt laws which will permit cities and towns to appropriate money and float loans for development of municipal airports and emergency flying fields.

Under the present law, it was brought out, a city cannot appropriate funds for such purpose. Neither can a city own land outside its own limits, save for watershed purposes.

Representative Thomas R. Bateman of Winchester, vice-chairman of the commission, presided. Other members are Joseph W. Powell, Charles F. Taylor, Gardiner H. Fiske, Allan R. MacGregor and Paul J. Berielsen.

SEES PROFITS IN FIELDS.

E. C. Stacy, secretary of the Massachusetts Council of the New England Council and secretary of the Massachusetts Chamber of Commerce, urged the commission use every effort to have legislation passed which will foster building a vast network of flying fields and emergency landing fields throughout the State.

An interesting statement on the cost of aviation fields was given by William E. Arthur, head of the company which bears his name and specializes in development of aviation fields. He declared a majority of the fields now planned will return handsome profits on the investments.

At Portland, he said, a field costing $75,000 is being constructed. The field has 182 acres, will be lighted for night flying, will have a passenger station, one hangar and three run-ways. Exclusive of the land this airport, which will be known as a Class B field, will cost $61,000.

Schenectady is putting in a modern flying field at a cost of $60,000 less the cost of the land.

NOTABLES HEARD.

The Portland field will return net revenues of $16,000 annually after two years, the expert declared. This is based on a charge of $35 a month rental o fhangar space for one plane and $1 charge for landing with the assistance of the hangar crew. Oil and gasoline concessions swell the revenue.

Among others who spoke before the commission urging the formulation of a strong air program were Senator Charles H. Hartshorn of Gardner, Conrad Hemond of the Holyoke Chamber of Commerce, Mayor William Stopford of Beverly, Mayor Charles S. Ashley of New Bedford, P. N. Hall of the Westfield Chamber of Commerce, Harold E. Howard, representing Westfield; Walter C. Wilson, representing Lowell; Harold T. Dennison of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, George F. Hines of the Haverhill Chamber of Commerce, Alan Hall Andrews of Fall River, Representative Joseph N. O'Kane of Dudley, Representative O. F. Nelson Pratt of Saugus, Charles W. Potter of Waltham, James Whittall and Whiten Whittall of Worcester, S. W. Potter of North Adams and Joseph P. Murphy of Taunton.

LEASE IS LIMITED.

Paul Dodds of the Framingham Board of Trade told of the militia flying field there and plans to develop it, while Alfred E. Svenson, also of the Framingham Board of Trade, told how this field is outside the fog belt.

Mrs. Rogers urged legislation be enacted freeing all flying fields of State and local taxes until such time as they become self-sustaining.

Frederick J. Hillman, executive vice-president of the Springfield Chamber of Commerce, told of two options Springfield has on ground for a municipal flying field, the city awaiting only the passage of enabling legislation before purchasing.

Lloyd Williamson of the New England council urged smaller communities to combine in establishing flying and emergency landing fields.

8,000-Mile Trip to Get Squint at Sun Is Ruined by Cloud

New York, Aug. 1 (A.P.).—Completing an 8,000-mile journey in futile search of observations of the sun's eclipse on June 29, Prof. Harland T. Stetson of Harvard arrived from Sagernes, Norway, today. Instead of the sheaf of notes on the eclipse he had hoped to bring back he had only the memory of a cloud bank that shut out his view of the phenomenon at the last moment.

Dr. Stetson said up to the time of the eclipse, the skies were comparatively clear, but the moment the eclipse was scheduled to occur, a great cloud came out of the west, blocking his view and making his journey useless.

CLIFFORD WINS COURT BATTLE FOR CHILD

Dr. Joseph Clifford, Dorchester dentist, whose court battle with his divorced wife, Loretta, for the custody of the minor child of the couple, Marjorie, has occupied considerable of the attention of the Suffolk probate court, recently, won a victory at the hands of Judge McCoole, today.

The court granted the dentist custoday of the child. He also revoked that portion of the wife's degree which provided for the payment of $15 a week alimony.

The wife secured an uncontested divorce on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment. Later the husband sought custody of the child and a re-opening of the divorce case. The wife's mother dropped dead in the court room, after testifying against her daughter and in favor of the dentist.

HELD ON WEAPON CHARGE BY WEST END WOMAN

Charged with carrying a concealed weapon, Joseph Lombardo was held in $2,000 in Municipal Court today, his arrest being caused by a West End woman who charged he had threatened her life. Her name was withheld by the police.

Two years ago Lombardo was acquitted by a jury on a charge of inciting the murder of his wife in East Boston by another woman.

15 WOMEN FAINT IN CRUSH TO GREET LINDY

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 1 (I.N.S.).—Fifteen women in a vast crowd of 40,000 persons fainted at the airport here today as Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh hopped off for Cleveland in the "Spirit of St. Louis."

The women were treated at the emergency hospital at the airport.

Colonel Lindbergh hopped off at 1 o'clock, daylight saving time.

Big Welcome for Lindy in Cleveland Today

Cleveland, O., Aug. 1 (I.N.S.).—The most elaborate and enthusiastic welcome ever accorded any individual is planned here today for the arrival of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, due to land at the Cleveland airport in his famous New York to Paris plane at 2 p. m. today.

The city's thousands will pay honor, not only to the air hero, but to Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, his host and mentor during his Paris stay. Ambassador Herrick is recovering from a serious operation in a hospital in Cleveland.

Colonel Lindbergh will visit him immediately after arriving. A huge parade, which will give to hundreds of thousands opportunity to see the hero, and a banquet tonight will be features of the celebration.

Fog Keeps Harbor Under Cover for Eight Hours

Boston harbor today was again blanketed with a fog that crippled shipping. The inbound Hamburg-American liner Westphalia, with 500 passengers aboard, was held at anchor for eight hours in the lower harbor before it could creep up from North Channel.

The Provincetown steamer Dorothy Bradford cancelled her run on account of the fog.

At Quarantine a fleet of inbound and outbound vessels rode at anchor, waiting in vain for the fog to lift. Nantasket and ferry boats moved at snail's pace until mid-afternoon, when the sun burned away some of the fog.

MOTORCYCLIST IN CRASH DIES

Edward L. Clark, 22, son of Dr. E. H. Clark of No. 219 Commonwealth avenue, Chestnut Hill, died in Worcester City Hospital today as a result of injuries sustained Saturday when the motorcycle he was riding was in collision with an automobile in Spencer.

Clay Blanton, 16, of Ashland, Va., driver of the car, was taken into custody charged with driving on the wrong side of the road, but was released in juvenile session of the district court today.

Clark's left leg, caught between his motorcycle and the radiator of the automobile, was taken off.

BRITISH ENVOY RUSHES TO SEE SECRETARY KELLOGG

Washington, Aug. 1 (A.P.).—Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador, returned to Washington from the Summer Embassy at Manchester, Mass., today on an unheralded visit and was in private conference with Secretary Kellogg at the State Department for more than half an hour.

Washington officials would not indicate what significance the visit might have in view of the situation at Geneva, where the three-power naval limitation conference is on the verge of adjournment without agreement.

It was said at the State Department that the ambassador had come to Washington on his own motion and had not been asked by Mr. Kellogg to visit the State Department. It was clearly indicated that no new American proposal in relation to the deadlock at Geneva on the cruiser problem was in prospect.

British embassy officials said no new developments in the Geneva conference should be expected from the conversation between Secretary Kellogg and Ambassador Howard.

The ambassador's return to Washington, they said, had been at Sir Esme's initiative and not by orders from London. It was prompted by a desire of the ambassador to keep in touch with the administration here.

Unless circumstances arise demanding his presence here, Sir Esme plans to return to Manchester, Mass., as soon as possible before proceeding to the inauguration of the Peace Bridge at Buffalo next Sunday.

Showdown at Geneva Is Set for Thursday

Geneva, Aug. 1 (A.P.).—The deadlock in the tripartite naval conference was the subject of a long talk today between Viscount Ishii of Japan and W. C. Bridgeman, First Lord of the British Admiralty. Bridgeman later conferred with the representatives of the British Dominions.

"I got the idea from Florenz Ziegfeld"

Florenz Ziegfeld, famous theatrical producer, writes:

"As the producer of 'The Ziegfeld Follies' I know full well how important it is for my stars to have clear voices at all times. Several years ago, when I first began to smoke Lucky Strikes, I noticed that my voice remained unirritated after a most strenuous time directing rehearsals. I passed this information on to my stars and now we are all agreed: Lucky Strike is a delightful smoke and most assuredly protects the voice, eliminating any coughing, which often interrupts a perfect performance."

You, too, will find that Lucky Strikes are mild and mellow—the finest cigarettes you ever smoked, made of the finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos, properly aged and blended with great skill, and there is an extra process—"It's toasted"—no harshness, not a bit of bite.

EX-WIFE OF CAROL TAKES EXILE BLAME

Paris, Aug. 1 (I.N.S.)—That Princess Helen, former wife of Prince Carol and the mother of King Michael, the five-year-old ruler of Rumania, has written to Carol recently, admitting a great part of the responsibility for the present exile of the former Crown Prince, was revealed today to International News Service. Helen is said to have asked Carol's forgiveness.

International News Service, through information just obtained, is in a position to give the authentic story of Carol's abdication, which followed his complete estrangement from Princess Helen.

Princess Helen left Carol before the present scandal developed, going to visit her mother and forbidding Carol to follow her. She declared she intended to obtain a divorce.

Carol came to Paris and Helen wrote to him later asking him not to return to Rumania, declaring she never wanted to see him again.

Carol met Mme. Lupescu in Paris and accompanied her later to Italy, where he received a command from Premier Bratianu to return to Rumania forthwith and admit wrongdoing publicly, or abdicate his right of succession to the Rumanian throne.

Carol hot-headedly chose the latter course as demonstrating clearly he was not ashamed of his actions. He believed that, in view of his break with his wife Helen, he had done nothing for which he should ask forgiveness.

Move Was Fatal

Philadelphia, Aug. 1 (A.P.)—Kohn Maloney, 38, of Fiskdale, Mass., was struck by a motor car and killed today. Police said he stepped from behind a pillar of a railway bridge directly in the path of the automobile.

DIRIGIBLE RS-1 IS HOME AFTER RECORD TRIP

Scott Field, Belleville, Ill., Aug. 1 (A.P.)—Having broken its previous record for sustained flight, the RS-1, the world's largest semi-rigid airship, was back in its home hangar today after remaining aloft 36½ hours on a successful trip from Lakehurst, N. J.

In response to a radio message last night, a landing party of 220 was called here to bring the huge cigar-shaped craft to the earth and stow it away. The drone of its motors and the sparkle of its red, white and green lights heralded its coming.

Circling the field the ship landed gently with the aid of beacon lights playing upon the field and hangar.

The last leg of the flight required slightly more than one and one-half days, during which time the ship tried to land both at Buffalo, N. Y., and near Cleveland, but was prevented by rainy weather. Its crew of nine men, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel John A. Paegelow, then headed the ship straight for Scott Field.

Two landings were made during the trip; one at Langley Field, Va., and the other at Lakehurst.

The cruise, which is the longest and severest test endured by the ship, was pronounced a complete success by Lieutenant-Colonel Paegelow.

BETTY ALDEN'S SOCIETY COMMENT

Newport Smart Set Rehearses for Benefit Pantomime to Be Held This Evening

WHATEVER BENEFIT OR BENEVOLENCE the Newport colony takes up it serves most faithfully and enthusiastically. Witness yesterday's rehearsal of the Pantomime and Living Portraits that engages Fashionable attention this evening to the benefit of the Newport County League for Animals. Those chosen to portray famous paintings, or to step the minuet's dainty measure put in the entire Summer Sunday afternoon going through their parts to be letter perfect when the curtain goes up. Scenes and pictures of great beauty abound.

NOTHING COULD BE MORE EFFECTIVE PICTORIALLY than the Madonna of Boticelli. The bright and brilliant blue and scarlet of the Madonna's robes shining out of its golden frame won a round of applause at rehearsal. Newport's smart younger set, the clique not yet in the social swim officially, portrays the Boticelli—Miss Anna Gould and Miss Eleanor Gould, and Miss Elizabeth Larocque as the Madonna and two attending saints.

THE PASTEL TINTED FRAGONARD IS DONE in delicate French Courtnay by Mrs. Lorillard Spencer as the gallant swain, in a honey colored satin and Mrs. Edward V. Hartford wearing a pancake hat saucily aslant and a billowing taffeta frock, designed in rose garlands tied with skyblue ribbons. Miss Natalja Willard does an effective Goya portrait, a lady of several centuries past arrayed in stiff satins and lustrous velvets.

MRS. AUSTIN SANDS WEARS A MOST BECOMING white wig and a corn yellow taffeta frock as she leads the Minuet of Nicolette, with Lawrence Phelps Tower, 2d, playing the lover, in periwig, satins and laces such as the gallant of a former century considered "the thing." Miss Helen Mitchell, a charming young Newporter, adorns the scene as a piquant Pandora. Society will be at the Colonial Theatre, down in Thames Street, in great numbers to see this pleasing entertainment.

TOMORROW IS ANOTHER GARDEN DAY IN Newport. For a very insignificant sum the public may gaze upon the formal beauties of the Berwind estate, the chateau-like graystone pile set in a wealth of landscaped vistas that is the Newport establishment of Edwin and Miss Julia Berwind. Newport's Civic League and its good works receive the financial rewards from these visits, and such rewards are more than substantial for everyone loves to stroll through such marvels as these multimillionaire estates afford.

WITH HALF A DOZEN GIANT STEAMSHIPS nosing their way out of New York last night about midnight it is quite within reason that the Boston sets of society and the arts should have representation aboard one or another. That favorite liner, the France, takes over its usual representative contingent. One notable Bostonian sailing is Mrs. William Lindsey, who is and has been for some years past, more of England than America.

MRS. LINDSEY'S STAY ON THIS SIDE HAS not been long, but takes on special interest since she has been the hostess of Princess Cantacuzene down at the Lindsey place in Osterville. Frank Brewer Bemis of Beverly Farms sails on the France for another of the frequent journeys that take him to the Old World, and Reginald Foster of the Fenway also is a passenger on the France for her current sailings. Erlund Fish is now outbound.

PROMINENT OUT-OF-TOWNERS well known in Boston's smart set taking ship for France are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Damrosch and Charles J. Biddle. The Damrosches came down from their Bar Harbor place to make this sailing that varies steamship departures so pleasantly by getting out in the small hours of the morning.

NO CHANCE FOR QUAKE TO DODGE SCIENCE NOW

Washington, Aug. 1 (A.P.)—Within a few hours after delicate seismograph needles at a score of stations over the Western hemisphere began signalling an earthquake May 23, the coast and geodetic survey announced from Washington that the shock was a serious one, and located its incidence somewhat in the Kansu region of China.

Two long months after that announcement, the actual news began to trickle in from China, reporting 100,000 lives had been lost in the disaster.

It has become a matter of every day routine for Commander N. H. Heck, the survey's chief of seismological study, and his staff to locate with precision the spot affected by earthquakes.

As soon as a quake is registered code telegrams from various stations are sent to Washington giving the exact time at each point, and describing the character of shocks.

An earthquake sends out three and sometimes four series of differing waves, and the job of locating the point disturbed is solved by comparing the character and speed of the waves as registered at different points.

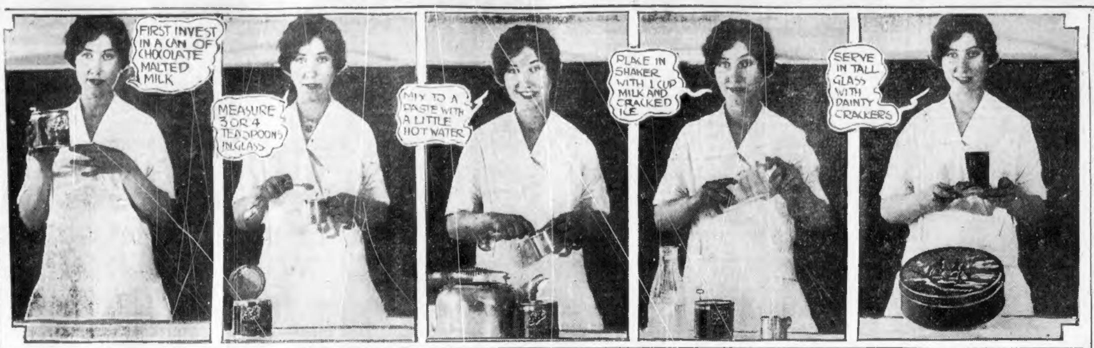
MARTHA LEE FINDS MALTED MILK IS GOOD



FIRST INVEST IN A CAN OF CHOCOLATE MALTED MILK
MEASURE 3 OR 4 TEASPOONS IN GLASS
MIX TO A PASTE WITH A LITTLE HOT WATER
PLACE IN SHAKER WITH 1 CUP MILK AND CRACKED ICE
SERVE IN TALL GLASS WITH DAINTY CRACKERS

Refreshing in Summer

CERTAIN it is that the inner man or woman does not respond very enthusiastically to the thought of what is usually known as "good substantial food" these sultry days. But equally certain it is that the human engine must be fueled with sufficient food to keep it working efficiently. The problem is what food to choose that will accomplish this with the least possible danger of an overheated engine. Ten chances to one your diet these days consists of something like this: for breakfast, half a melon and a cup of coffee; for lunch, crackers and milk; and for dinner, cold meat, salad, an iced drink and possibly a light dessert.

So far, so good—but better if in between meals you would treat your tummy to a cool, refreshing beverage such as chocolate flavored, sweetened malted milk—a delicious, nourishing health-building beverage that is good for everybody, and particularly beneficial for growing children. A can of this chocolate flavored, sweetened malted milk, a bottle of milk and cracked ice will furnish refreshing, cooling enjoyment for the whole family.

Really, I know of few foods which contain so many of the health-building properties as this delicious, invigorating drink. It relieves fatigue, generates energy—quiets the nerves and is particularly valuable during this heated season when we need every bit of energy we possess to carry out the day's routine. And it's so simple to prepare.

Just measure three or four teaspoons of the chocolate malted milk powder in a glass or cup, mix to a paste with a little hot water, place in a shaker with one cup of milk and serve—cool, foamy and refreshing—in a tall glass with perhaps a dainty cracker for an accompaniment.

For the picnic, automobile ride or excursion, this food drink may be carried in a thermos bottle. It's invaluable, too, for boy and girl scouts on the trail. The addition of an egg produces an even more nourishing drink, or the powder may be used for cake frosting, for fudge, ice cream, puddings and chocolate sauce.

Best of all—good news for the women who are striving for the stylish, slender figures—nourishing and delicious, this malted milk is a real food drink, but it builds bone and muscle instead of fat which earns for it an important place on reducing diets. I'm sure that you'd find a can of this in your home a very worth while permanent feature.

There's magic in the words—

A good cup of coffee! There's magic in the very words! Steaming, fragrant coffee, richly creamed to mellow deliciousness, is one of the big joys in life.

But bottled cream certainly is expensive. Lots of families think they must get along without cream—and every cup of coffee they drink brings real disappointment.

Don't be disappointed! It isn't necessary—even when economy must be carefully considered. Recipe for Making a Fine Sandwich Loaf

From Miss Daurice Darling, director of the Home Service Department of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, comes this recipe for a delicious sandwich loaf: Remove the crust from one loaf of bread. Cut in 4 slices lengthwise. Put together with three different sandwich fillings.

Suggestions for fillings are: Red—Ham and mayonnaise. Green—Chopped pickles and cream cheese. Yellow—Chopped hard cooked eggs, mixed with mayonnaise, put together in layers and spread cream cheese on all four sides of loaf. Garnish with pimento.

Dishes for Hot Days

IT requires a little extra effort on the part of the one who plans the menus to provide meals that help to arouse the flagging appetites of the family during the warm weather. Daintily prepared dishes always act as stimulants.

Ham has a zest that invariably appeals and the housewife will find there are many dishes that may be prepared in the morning, placed in the refrigerator, served for the noonday or the evening meal, and with but little effort on her part.

Cold sliced ham cut in thin slices with a crisp green salad is always a popular combination, while the gelatine dishes such as a mousse or an aspic are both cooling and dainty. These make tempting company luncheon dishes.

HAM MOUSSE — One-half pint cream (whipped), ½ cup liquid aspic (lemon jelly), 1 cup finely chopped ham. Few drops pink coloring.

Mix all together quickly until well blended, then pack into a mousse mold and set on ice until firm. The mold should first be coated over with liquid aspic and then decorated with the white of an egg.

HAM WITH JELLIED VEGETABLES—Soak a tablespoon of granulated gelatin in a quarter cup of cold water and dissolve in one cup boiling water; then add a quarter cup each of sugar and vinegar, two tablespoons lemon juice, and one teaspoon salt. Strain, cool, and when beginning to stiffen, add one cup celery cut in small pieces, one-half cup finely shredded cabbage, and one and one-half canned pimientos cut in small pieces.

Turn into a mold and chill. Remove from mold and arrange around the jelly thin slices of cooked ham overlapping one another. Garnish with celery tips.

HAM SALAD—One cup finely chopped cooked ham, 1 cup finely chopped celery, 1 cup small peas, ¼ cup finely chopped pimientos, ¼ cup finely chopped onion, ¼ cup finely chopped green peppers.

Combine ingredients in order given and blend with a boiled salad dressing. Serve on hearts of lettuce.

Poached Egg in Tomato Is Attractive Dish

Remove skin and centre of large, ripe tomato. Season well with salt and paprika. Place in buttered ramekin. Cut a piece of bread large enough to keep the centre of tomato open. Dip bread in onion juice or rub well with garlic, insert in tomato centre, and bake until tomato is cooked. Remove piece of bread, put in one-half teaspoon of butter, break a fresh egg in centre. Cover with browned buttered bread crumbs. Return to oven and cook until egg is set. Serve immediately.

Long, Cold Drink

A THIRSTY family, especially the youngsters, are likely to demand "something different" in drinks, and the wise house mother will keep something of the kind in the icebox constantly.

The most satisfying drinks are really simple, as far as ingredients are concerned. It is the combination of flavors that stamps the maker as an artist or a novice. Lemonade should be tart, neither too sweet nor too sharp.

All drinks should be iced, and nothing is more attractive than the addition of ice pounded to snow in a stout canvas bag.

There are three accessories which contribute to the possibility of an ever ready and always refreshing cold beverage. One is a jar of plain sugar syrup always in the refrigerator and ready to use for sweetening.

Undissolved sugar can never give the sweetness and evenness of flavor that syrup does. Another is a supply of ginger ale to give the pep of carbonated water.

The third convenience is the electric refrigerator with its ice cubes always ready and its interior always chilly enough to keep the glasses and the ingredients in the proper condition for serving.

MINT PUNCH—Wash a quart of spearmint leaves well, dry by shaking and then mash till soft. Cover with boiling water and let stand ten minutes. Strain and set, covered, in the icebox. At serving time add one cup of grape juice and one of red raspberry juice. Sweeten to taste and add as much lemon juice as is needed to bring out and combine the flavors. Stick a tiny sprig of mint in each glass.

TEA PUNCH—Make a strong tea, but let it steep only four minutes, otherwise it will become cloudy. Add one-third as much lemon juice as tea, with sugar to sweeten. Keep very cold and, when serving, add one bottle of ginger ale.

PINEAPPLE JULEP—Add the juice of two oranges to a grated pineapple and a pint of mashed raspberries; stir in half a cup of powdered sugar and at serving time add water, either plain or effervescent.

Ice Cream Making as an Art

IMPORTANT points in ice cream making:

1. Cream fresh from the separator or pasteurizer produces a coarse-grained ice-cream. To whip well and to remain whipped, a cream should be cold, and should be 24 hours old.

2. A small amount of salt added to ice-cream brings out the flavor and improves the finished product.

3. In making ice-cream with a custard foundation, always mix the flour or corn-starch with the sugar and cook thoroughly with the milk before adding the egg.

4. A non-rich cream mixture can be improved by the addition of a small amount of gelatine or by the use of condensed or evaporated milk.

5. Ice-cream mixtures should never be put into the freezer when warm. Pre-cooling cuts down the actual freezing period and gives a better product.

6. Never fill the can more than two-thirds full of the mixture to be frozen. Leave at least one-third the space for the swell.

7. Use only coarse freezing salt for freezing ices and ice-creams. Good results can not be obtained with the use of table salt.

8. The ice should be fine and evenly crushed.

9. In freezing use the proportion of eight measures of ice to one measure of salt. You can not be too careful in these measurements.

10. Fill the freezer two-thirds full of ice before adding any salt. Then add salt and ice in alternate layers.

11. Use two speeds in freezing ice-cream. Turn very slowly until the mixture begins to pull slightly to turn hard, then increase the speed in order to whip the mixture.

12. Ice-cream may be frozen until of the consistency to serve immediately. However, we recommend that it be frozen to the consistency of a very thick cream sauce, and then packed and ripened.

13. If the ripening time is short the packing mixture should be in the proportion of four parts of ice to one of salt. If [illegible]ger, use the eight-to-one mixtu[illegible]

IN MAKING FISH [illegible] have your potatoes dry.

Baking Soda Good First-Aid for Sunburn

Cover the affected parts with a paste of baking soda (bicarbonate of soda) and water. When the moisture has been absorbed from the paste, the fire will be gone from the burn and the danger of blistering will be lessened.

A helpful and effective way to remove the paste after it has dried out is to bathe in a tub of lukewarm water in which a pound of baking soda has been dissolved. This baking soda is of itself a soothing treatment for sunburn.

When Bananas Are Most Wholesome Food

Here's a golden promise to mothers of hungry, growing children: When, from tip to tip, the banana turns a rich golden yellow, when nature's germ-proof seal is lightly flecked with brown, it becomes a most wholesome food, even for little folks.

This is why: In a fully ripe banana, the first step of digestion has already taken place. The starch content has been changed into easily digested sugars—the energy-making carbohydrates that little bodies need.

So buy bananas by the hand. Let them ripen nature's way at room temperature. Then put some of them where little people—and big people—can reach these golden, brown-flecked packs of goodness.

Pineapple in Reducing

WHILE the natural fruit sugar in pineapple is not fattening, it provides energy and satisfies the craving for sugar. It also supplies the system with vitamins, mineral salts, carbohydrates, and a mysterious "enzyme promelin," which is a direct aid to digestion.

In a no-fat, no-starch, no-sweet diet, which, if strictly followed, is capable of removing one pound a day, pineapple is most valuable. This would be a representative day's menu on this diet:

Breakfast—Pineapple, juice, thin slice of whole wheat bread, unbuttered and toasted very dry, poached egg, coffee without sugar or cream.

Luncheon—Beef bouillon, sauerkraut, lamb chop, hard-cooked egg on lettuce, pineapple slices.

Dinner—Clear tomato bouillon, spinach, beefsteak, asparagus, grapefruit and pineapple dessert.

Wouldn't you like me to send you my four-page collection of frozen desserts? There's a list of home-made sundaes—unusually delicious combinations of ice creams, sauces, nuts and fruits that I know you won't want to miss.

Do you call dishwashing "a lark"?

This Brattleboro woman says it is — now!

Something has certainly happened to dishwashing methods when women can write us (as hundreds of them have) to say that it has become fun instead of drudgery.

Another such letter reached us recently from Mrs. Wennersten of Brattleboro, Vt.

"My glassware sparkles and the china gleams, just as the directions promise," she says. "I never liked pots and pans, but now with Chipso to chase the grease away washing them has become a lark. And my husband says he never saw a soap flake that did so much work in so short a time!"

Why does Chipso enable you to transform dishwashing?

First, because Chipso makes instant suds. You just pour hot water on the flakes and rich creamy suds form themselves.

Second, when you use the Chipso method, you let Chipso suds do the hard third of the work — they soak the grease off.

This is the Chipso method: Wash your glass and silver first, as usual. Before you rinse and dry them, put the china in the Chipso suds to dissolve the grease. While you're drying the china, soak the grease off utensils in the same way. This way keeps your hands out of hot dishwater. It saves them! It gets you through each dishwashing ten minutes quicker! This means a new leisure half hour every day.

The large Chipso box at your grocer's contains so many flakes that it does a month of dishwashings. So a day's dishwashing costs less than a penny.

Hot Days Desserts

SHERBETS made from fruit juices, as lemon, orange, grape or cherry, are especially suitable as a warm weather dessert for children. Frozen custard made of milk and eggs also is refreshing. But since frozen fruit desserts always contain more sugar than those thickened with eggs, gelatine or cornstarch, they should not be used more than once or twice a week for little children. On the other hand, the cool, but not iced fruit drinks may be given freely. They should contain as little sugar as can be used to make them palatable. Here are some cooling recipes:

LEMON MILK SHERBERT—2 cups milk, 1 cup sugar, ¼ cup lemon juice.

Mix sugar and lemon juice. Add this mixture slowly to milk, stirring constantly. Freeze.

RASPBERRY SHERBERT — 1 quart raspberries, 1¼ cups sugar, 1 cup water, 1 egg white, 2 tbsps. lemon juice.

Wash the berries carefully; cover with sugar and allow them to stand for an hour or two. Crush the berries and squeeze through a cheesecloth bag. Add water, lemon juice and slightly beaten egg white. Freeze.

ORANGE ICE—2 cups water, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup orange juice, grated peel of 1 orange, juice of 1 lemon.

Boil sugar and water together. Add fruit juice and grated orange peel; cool, strain. Freeze.

FROZEN CUSTARD—1 quart hot milk, 4 eggs, ⅓ cup sugar, few grains salt, 1 tsp. vanilla.

Beat eggs; add sugar and salt, and gradually, the hot milk. Cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly until custard coats the spoon. Cool, add vanilla, and freeze.

WHEN HANGING CURTAINS put a thimble on the end of your curtain rod and the curtains will slip on easily without tearing.

TURN THE COLANDER upside down over fish or meat when frying in a pan. The small holes prevent spattering, yet allow the steam to escape.

White House Corn Muffins Recipe

MANY of you will, I am sure, be as interested as I was to try this recipe for White House corn muffins. This is the exact recipe for the muffins which form an important item on many Presidential breakfast menus.

Two cups cornmeal, 1 cup flour, 1 cup sweet milk, 2 eggs, well beaten; ½ cup sugar; 2 tbsps. of baking powder.

This will make exactly fourteen muffins.

Fun Drinking Milk

IF your child dislikes to drink milk, try making a game of it. The child will probably drink more milk, and, taken under pleasant conditions, it is much more apt to nourish him than when he is forced to drink it. Do not give the child a whole glass of milk at once.

Put a tiny glass by his plate and fill it up, asking him to see if he can empty it. Suggest also, that he see how many sips he can get out of it, if he is old enough to count.

The other children may be included in the idea, making a sort of contest to see how many little glasses of milk each one can drink, limiting the amount to that which they can comfortably consume.

With small glasses, they are not apt to drink too much. If the child is old enough, put a small pitcher with the rest of the milk beside his plate and let him pour it out himself.

When he is interested in pouring it, you will be surprised how much more readily he will drink his regular quota of milk. A few drops of vanilla often overcomes the fancied distaste some kiddies have for this necessary liquid food.

Removing the Shine

SHINE is caused either by the wearing away of the nap of the cloth or by its becoming matted down with grease, oils and dirt. The first condition, generally found in an old and long-worn garment, can be corrected but partially, as the "nap" has been worn away. In the second case the remedy is simple—to remove the grease and dirt and allow the "nap" to stand up again.

Sponge the skirt on the right side with a mild solution of water and a cleaning powder used commercially for this purpose. I will gladly send you the name if you're interested. This solution breaks up the grease and oils which bind the dirt to the surface and hold down the nap. When the "shine" is removed the nap can stand up again. Then press the skirt on the wrong side.

Diet and Styles

STYLES are demanding the long straight line and if business girls conform to the fashion with the tendency of too little exercise and high carbohydrate consumption in the form of candy and pastry, the amount of food eaten must be reduced.

Breakfast, being the least interesting meal of the day, is usually offered up in sacrifice.

"Diet madness" is a form of insanity not found so often among younger women as "dowagers who are enjoying too much prosperity and have been frightened into reducing," deplores Miss Katherine Fisher, director of Good Housekeeping Institute. She points out the stand the General Federation of Women's Clubs took on the reducing subject at their last annual meeting. A safe and sane method of reducing, if women would keep their health, is urged by those who realize what the "no breakfast" or the "starvation breakfast" means to future generations.

The reducing diet does not necessarily mean cutting out nourishing foods as much as fattening ones, but the average woman does not know the difference.

A cooked cereal, such as oatmeal, for instance, served with milk instead of sugar is nourishing, compared with a large amount served with rich cream and more sugar in the diet for underweights.

Soup Served as Tomato Sauce

PERHAPS it is news to thousands that skillful housewives garnish many different dishes with tomato sauce that comes from a can labeled condensed "Tomato Soup!"

Tomato soup, just as it comes from the can and without the addition of water, makes tomato sauce. It is the essence of tomatoes, with butter and seasoned by experienced chefs.

Meat and fish are garnished with it. Breaded lamb chops, veal cutlets, Hamburger steak, goulash, hashes and stews, sausages and frankfurters, meat and fish balls—these "taste so much better" with the addition of this tomato sauce.

And of course there are many salads the housewife prepares with the aid of this tomato soup sauce.

Icing That Will Not Harden

THE following recipe makes an icing that will keep soft for some time, and that is not so sweet as the usual icing.

Measure half a teaspoonful of granulated gelatine, and hydrate in two teaspoonfuls of cold water for three or four minutes. Dissolve in two tablespoonfuls of boiling water, and stir in a cup of confectioners' sugar, and a teaspoonful of lemon or any other extract you like. Beat until smooth, and of the right consistency to spread—it may take ten minutes, or more or less, according to the vigor of the beating.

CARAMEL SAUCE—1½ cups sugar, 1 cup water, 1 teaspoon vanilla extract. Caramelize sugar and stir in slowly the boiling water. Let boil to a thick syrup, add vanilla. If the sauce is to be served hot, let the saucepan containing it remain in a large pan of hot water until needed. Chopped seedless raisins may be added to this sauce.

Meat Loaf Au Gratin

PUT through a food chopper two pounds of the top of the round; add two eggs, beaten light, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper, two tablespoons of melted butter, a little onion juice and one thick slice of bread which has been soaked in water and squeezed to remove most of the moisture.

Mix the ingredients evenly through the meat; shape into a loaf. Set the loaf in a greased dripping pan and bake about ninety minutes at 450 degrees F. Remove from the oven, let cool partially.

Mix two cups of cracker crumbs with three tablespoons of melted butter, one-eighth of a teaspoon of salt and two eggs, beaten light. Use this mixture to cover the meat loaf and return it to the oven to brown the crumbs.

How to Obtain Quick Relief From Insect Bites

Vacation days are sure to bring collisions with bees, wasps, hornets and other stinging insects. For quick relief from the pain of insect bites, apply a paste of baking soda and water; or else bathe the bites frequently with a solution of baking soda in the proportion of two teaspoonfuls of soda to each pint of water.

Try This Recipe for Making a Fruit Punch

Grate one pineapple, and to it add three cups of boiling water and four cups of sugar. Boil twenty minutes. Add one cup of freshly made tea. Strain and chill. Add two cups of strawberry juice, six quarts of water, the juice of eight oranges, the juice of four lemons, one cup of fresh strawberries, one cup of banana slices, the sliced rind of one cucumber and a piece of ice.

Salmon and Caper Sauce

SELECT a middle cut of the salmon, weighing about four pounds. Tie the fish in a piece of cheesecloth and drop into a kettle of hot, salted water, to which has been added two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Bring to the boiling point and let simmer until the flesh easily separates from the bones.

Remove the fish from the cheesecloth, place on a platter, garnish with pickled cucumber rings and serve with caper sauce.

To make the caper sauce:

In a saucepan melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add four tablespoonfuls of flour, and stir until the mixture bubbles. Gradually add one cup of milk and one cup of the liquid, strained, in which the fish has been cooked, and one-fourth a teaspoonful of salt, stirring constantly until the mixture is smooth and boiling.

Let simmer for five minutes, then add three tablespoonfuls of capers.

To Keep Fruit Afloat

THE following methods are recommended to keep fruit from sinking in a cake and each finds favor with many cake-makers.

1. Put the batter into the tin in alternate layers with the fruit, which should be placed by hand, and a piece at a time, over each layer of batter—and the batter to cover the fruit should be put on by spoonfuls and only enough at a time to cover the fruit.

2. Work the fruit into the creamed butter and sugar, so that it is thoroughly incorporated with the butter. This lessens its density, and keeps it from sinking, but it loses its shape, and makes the cake darker. We like the flavor of cakes made in this way,—they taste more of the fruit.

3. After washing the fruit, place it on a dish in the oven until it swells up smooth and bloated. Then add it the last thing to the batter.

We do not mention flouring the fruit, for of course you know this old way of keeping it from sinking.

BUTTER SCOTCH SAUCE—1 cup sugar, ¼ cup molasses, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 2 tablespoons boiling water, ½ cup butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla extract. Boil all ingredients except extract for five minutes. Remove from fire and flavor with extract. Keep the sauce warm over a pan of hot water until ready to serve.

FR. ROCKWELL, NOTED JESUIT EDUCATOR, DIES

Rev. Joseph H. Rockwell, S. J., procurator of the Jesuit Province of New England, died today at Carney hospital.

Father Rockwell was one of the most prominent Jesuit educators in America and held various posts of distinction in the Jesuit Order for more than a quarter of a century.

He entered the Society of Jesus as a student from Boston College in October, 1851, and was for several years professor of rhetoric before his ordination to the priesthood. After a three years' course in theology he was ordained at Woodstock by Cardinal Gibbons in 1895.

As prefect and director of studies, Father Rockwell became widely known as an educator and well beloved by the students of Boston College. In 1907, he was appointed Socius to the provincial of the Maryland-New York Jesuit Province which, at that time, included New England. From 1913 to 1917, he was rector of St. Francis Xavier College in New York and was appointed provincial in 1918.

His ability as an educator and administrator was acknowledged in his election to the presidency of the Association of Colleges of New York, and by frequent demands, during his incumbency as president of Brooklyn College, for his public lectures on educational subjects.

Shortly after the establishment of the Jesuit Province of New England in 1926, Fr. Rockwell was named as General Procurator of the Province.

He was a descendant of a distinguished family that has figured prominently in the history of New England.

The late Colonel and Mrs. Horace T. Rockwell were his parents. He is survived by a brother, George A. Rockwell, and by two sisters, Miss Maud M. Rockwell and Mrs. William J. Walton of Beacon street.

Funeral services, to which friends are invited, will take place Wednesday at 10 a. m. in the Immaculate Conception Church, Harrison avenue. Burial will be in Holy Cross College Cemetery, Worcester. The Office of the Dead will be chanted in the Immaculate Conception Church at 7:30 tomorrow evening.

ALL MONTREAL CHEERS WALES ON PARADE

OFF TO GOLF LINKS.

As soon as the formalities were over the Prince hurried back to his hotel, changed into golfing togs and was off for an afternoon of golf at Sur-Le-Lac.

An all-day sail up the St. Lawrence River brought the Prince of Wales, Prince George and Premier Stanley Baldwin to Montreal.

Bonfires and rockets greeted the passage of the S. S. St. Lawrence as it neared the city. Thousands lined the waterfront for the last seven miles of the 110½-mile voyage.

The Princes and the Premier left Quebec in the morning. They arrived here at night. The party left ship at the brilliantly illuminated Prince of Wales wharf in this largest inland seaport of the world.

WAVES HANDKERCHIEF.

After a day of comparative rest, the Princes and party joined about 100 guests, including the press, in the S. S. St. Lawrence's dining salon. The Prince of Wales left the salon twice to go astern to get a better view of the harbor panorama and to wave his handkerchief. He was in fine spirits. The welcome in the harbor was a noisy one, with guns booming and tugs whistling.

The leave taking of the brother princes and premier from Quebec was accompanied by the farewell cheers of several thousands of citizens and tourists. The royal salute of twenty-one guns sounded from the citadel. The prince's military guard stood at attention. A regimental band played "God Save the King."

The two princes, clad in double-breasted blue suits, pin-striped held their bowler hats in their left hands and they said goodbye to Quebec's official and social leaders. They had been driven to King's Wharf from the Anglican Cathedral of the Holy Trinity. The S. S. St. Lawrence, 7,000-ton flagship of the Canadian Steamship lines river fleet, awaited the princes, Premier Baldwin and their party.

STAND UNDER AWNING.

The princes stood for several minutes under an awning on the main deck saluting as the river liner left the high terraced city astern. Tugs, pleasure boats, launches, skiffs, barges and many other craft dipped their colors and whistled as the royal visitors sped West on the broad stream. The S. S. St. Lawrence displayed the royal standard and the Union Jack.

Although the Prince of Wales appeared on deck several times to respond to cheers from the shore, or from occasional boats anchored along the channel, he spent most of his time in retirement. It was explained that His Royal Highness had stayed up rather late at Spencer Wood the night before.

Spencer Wood is the government house of Lieutenant-Governor Narcisse Perodeau of the Province of Quebec. A reception and dance of semi-private nature was tendered the two princes there. The Prince danced, it was said, only a few times. The names of his partners were not announced.

The princes occupied two spacious suites on B deck. The cabins were decorated in blue and Belgian gray. They were banked with flowers.

DODGES DISHES 15 YEARS, BUT SHE BALKS AT EGGS

Yonkers, N. Y., Aug. 1 (AP)—For fifteen years, Mrs. John Burke declares, she practiced dodging crockery and the smaller articles of household furniture, becoming in a modest way adept at side stepping. But when John added a dozen eggs to his daily barrage she considered it too raw and appealed to law.

PROBE DEATH OF 3 IN AIRPLANE CRASH

New Castle, Ind., Aug. 1 (A.P.)—An investigation was began today into the deaths of Lieutenant George G Myers, thirty-five, former pilot in an army overseas bombing squadron during the World War, and two youthful passengers who were killed when Myers' commercial plane crashed. Evan Davis, seventeen, son of a local banker, and Paul Wise, twenty-one, Indiana University student, were the other two killed.

Myers' ship was seen to suddenly dip upward at an altitude of 200 feet and then go into a nose dive. The plane fell sixty feet from the hangar and burst into flames.

ENVOY ATTENDS NAMING OF 'OLD GLORY'

It rained occasionally, and the crowd sought shelter, on these occasions, in the many automobiles and in the hangar. The rain was heavy when Bertaud and Hill, with Congressman La Guardia, Major-General McRae and Austin Clark, a newspaperman, as passengers, took the plane up for about half an hour, encircling the field many times.

Commander G. O. Gustafson of Old Glory Post presented the two pilots with a scroll.

Bertaud and Hill, beginning today will put "Old Glory" through a stiff series of tests to determine the most economical speed. These tests will probably last a week or ten days, after which the hop-off for Rome will be made.

Boston Protestants to Send Greeting to Pope

Boston's interest in the coming New York-Rome and return flight of William Randolph Hearst's monoplane "Old Glory," was further stimulated today when it was learned a letter to the Pope from the Massachusetts Federation of Churches and the Greater Boston Federation of Churches made up of Protestant denominations will be carried on the trip.

It was previously announced that a personal letter from Cardinal O'Connell to the Pope, written in Italian, would be sent to Rome on "Old Glory," both communications being forwarded through the Boston Evening American.

The letter from the Federations of Churches reads:

To His Holiness Pope Pius XI.
Honored Sir:

We send you greetings from Boston in the name of the Federation of Churches.

We are privileged in this first non-stop air flight from the United States of America to Rome and Italy thus to greet you by courtesy of the Boston Evening American.

The intrepid heroism of our aviators is making our world a neighborhood.

We are ambitious that our spiritual brotherhood may increase with equal rapidity and that the day for which our Lord prayed that "They all may be one as Thou Father art in Me and I in Thee," may come soon.

May the successful transfer of this message prove a link in the chain of spiritual fellowship that shall speed the day.

Respectfully and sincerely,
ROBERT WATSON,
President of the Massachusetts Federation of Churches.
Vice-president of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches.

This communication, embracing the good wishes of Protestant bodies in Boston, is expected to play a big part in connection with the flight of "Old Glory," in cementing the bonds of fellowship between the two nations.

Musicians Laborers Or Artists? That's Hard One to Crack

New York, Aug. 1 (A.P.)—The U. S. Department of Labor has been called upon to rule whether all musicians are artists or some merely "laborers in the field of music."

Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, contends some, especially jazz players, are "laborers," and therefore under the restrictions of the labor laws. The department in a preliminary answer held they were artists and therefore should be permitted free entry. The only "artists," in the opinion of Mr. Weber, are those having obvious genius, such as Kreisler and Heifetz.

Ex-Editor Is Postmaster

Fall River, Aug. 1 (AP).—Godfrey De Tonnacour, former newspaper editor, was named today by Congressman Joseph W. Martin Jr., as postmaster for Fall River. He was first appointed four years ago on recommendation of the late Congressman William S. Greene.

SARAH FULLER, TUTOR OF HELEN KELLER, DIES

Miss Sarah Fuller, who first taught Helen Keller who was associated with Professor Alexander Graham Bell, and who for more than half a century conducted a school for the deaf in Boston, died today at her home in Newton Lower Falls at the age of ninety-two.

Miss Fuller was principal emeritus of the Horace Mann School in Newbury street, which she was active in founding in 1869 and which she headed until her retirement from active service.

Born in Weston, Miss Fuller was educated in the public schools and in 1850 moved into the home at No. 122 Concord street, Newton Lower Falls, which she occupied until her death.

In 1869 Miss Fuller established the Horace Mann School with a class of twenty deaf pupils. The school grew until it was recognized as one of the leading institutions of its kind in the world.

In June, 1888, Miss Fuller met Helen Keller and gave her the first lessons in audible speech. Professor Bell was associated with Miss Fuller in teaching the deaf until the time he completed his work on the first telephone. Miss Fuller is survived by four nieces.

WHERE'S EMILY?

That's the question around which Carolyn Wells has built an absorbing serial to begin in The Boston Evening American on August 8.

"Sole heir to an enormous fortune . . . Emily did whatever she chose and had whatever she wanted . . . meddled in metaphysics and theosophy . . . and two days before her wedding disappeared."

You will say, as you begin the story, "No wonder they were all asking 'Where's Emily?' "

Stillman Sees "His Kids" Sail

A Story of Sylvia Bryant, Stenographer, Among the Money Crowd

Joyce Ackerman, society woman and wife of Vance Ackerman, a rich broker, appeals to a mutual friend, Alexander Ladd, a successful lawyer, to help her in her battle with Margot Liggett, who has won her husband's affections. Ladd proposes that Mrs. Ackerman engage Sylvia Bryant, his stenographer, a beautiful and charming young girl, as her social secretary. Mrs. Ackerman agrees and Ladd summons Sylvia.

Sylvia finally consents and her father and mother are very much pleased.

Ackerman calls for her, introduces her to Margot Liggett and takes her to his home.

There she meets Stuart Gifford, a cousin of Ackerman's, who offers to escort her home. Near her door they find Jimmy Devlin, an admirer of Sylvia, waiting for her.

CHAPTER VII.

VANCE ACKERMAN looked at his watch and left the room, deciding he had time to change to the more formal attire he usually wore for the theatre. Sylvia was in a bit of a daze.

Somehow, her intuition hesitated to accept Mrs. Ackerman's casual approval of the situation. It didn't ring true. Besides, Sylvia thought she glimpsed a momentary spasm—a haggard hurt—in Joyce's eyes. Stuart Gifford stood with his hands in his pockets gazing morosely into a blazing fireplace.

"Are you sure it's all right—for me to go out with Mr. Ackerman?" Sylvia asked, penetratingly.

Joyce smiled; a baffling lack of expression was in her eyes. "Child, you don't think I'm jealous, do you? I want you to go."

"But Mr. Ackerman is putting on his Tuxedo and that calls for evening things—I'm afraid my clothes aren't quite suitable—"

Again, Sylvia thought—imagined, perhaps—that Joyce Ackerman was suppressing some emotion as violent as sheet lightning, but Joyce, externally, was perfectly calm.

"Oh yes—about clothes. I'd forgotten I promised Mr. Ladd when I stole you from his staff that I'd fit you out in keeping with all extra-social duties that might fall to your lot." Sylvia was nonplussed and her face showed it.

"Oh, yes, that's only fair," Joyce said, quickly. "On your salary you couldn't dress the part. Since you're practically a part of the family we'll take care of you properly. But for tonight—would you really mind wearing some of my things?"

"Why, I hadn't expected you to buy my clothes!" Sylvia explained.

"All a part of the job!" Joyce declared; it dawned upon Sylvia that this social world was a realm in which money was so easy—so plentiful—that it was no source of worry. "Come on up to my room, child, and we'll see what's available."

Sylvia's heart beat a little faster, a little wilder. The truth was that she was thrilled, excited. Upstairs in Joyce's spacious bedroom, the door of an electrically lighted closet was thrown open disclosing a bewildering, colorful array of dresses on padded hangers. Row after row of shoes and satin slippers were on low shelves. Out of a mahogany chest with innumerable compartments Joyce Ackerman produced a wealth of webby, silken accessories. Everything was permeated with a mild fragrance.

She looked at Sylvia appraisingly. "I think this little orchid dress—with your eyes . . ." She took down an exquisite creation that seemed to have no weight at all. "Fortunately, we're almost identical in size."

PEACE IN STATE LABOR URGED

Fall River, Aug. 1 (AP).—The state branch of the American Federation of Labor opened its convention here today. Delegates were welcomed by Mayor W. Harry Monks, Judge Frank M. Silvia, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and John L. Campos, president of the Central Labor Union.

Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers, urged peace among labor organizations and Edward F. McGrady of Washington, D. C., legislative agent of the Federation of Labor, brought greetings of President William Green.

The business session was followed by an outing this afternoon. Tomorrow there will be a morning business session with an automobile trip about the city in the afternoon. Transportation for the trip is to be furnished by the Fall River automobile club of the Chamber of Commerce, and the Rotary, Lions and Kiwanis Clubs.

TOWN MENACED BY VESUVIUS

Naples, Italy, Aug. 1 (A.P.).—A stream of molten lava menaced the town of Terzigno today as the blazing fluid, following a new explosive outbreak within Mt. Vesuvius, overflowed from the "Valley of Hell" into the ravines leading toward the Bay of Naples.

A large section of the population of Terzigno and neighboring region began to flee towards Naples at dawn.

Strict orders have been issued forbidding all tourists and sight-seeing parties to go up the side of the mountain. These orders were issued after flaming fragments began to reach the Eremon Hotel, half-way point on the funicular railway line.

Wood Alcohol Kills Three

McAlester, Okla., Aug. 1 (A.P.)—Wood alcohol stolen from the paint shop at the State Penitentiary today had taken the lives of three convicts and left several others in a serious condition.

FLIER KILLED WHILE USING CONDEMNED ARMY PLANE

Wichita, Kan., Aug. 1 (A.P.).—Lieutenant C. A. Pearson, who was killed when his plane crashed from a height of 500 feet here yesterday, was piloting a "Jenny" ship of the type recently condemned by the army as obsolete, officers investigating the accident said today in reporting engine trouble as the apparent cause. Lieutenant C. W. Luthey, navigator, who was injured, is said to have a chance for recovery.

CHECK BIG REHOBOTH DAMAGE

State Police Take Charge of Storm Area; Casualties Total 1 Dead, 17 Hurt

Rehoboth, Aug. 1.—With the coming of daylight Rehoboth checked up the toll of the worst storm in its history to find one person dead, five injured seriously, a dozen others hurt slightly and tremendous property damage in the wake of what is described as a wind of the "twister" type.

Because the whole town was swept and many buildings were unroofed or destroyed, the State police from the local barracks patrolled the streets and refused to permit any to enter except doctors and others on official business.

This rule will be enforced until the storm debris is cleared away the police announced.

The person killed in the tempest the climax of which was a sudden whirling wind of high velocity, lasting only about thirty seconds, was nineteen-year-old Roland Isherwood of No. 6 South street, Taunton.

He was killed when a carriage shed torn from its foundation at the rear of the Rehoboth Congregational Church hurtled through the air and fell upon the Bay State highway crushing an auto and its occupants. In the auto besides the youth were his mother and brother, Mrs. James Isherwood, forty-two, and Harold Isherwood, seventeen; and James W. Walton, forty-two, and his wife, Mary W., thirty-eight, and their daughter, Norma, six.

All five were treated at the Morton Hospital, Taunton.

Their auto was on its way to the church for a special union service. Inside the building 150 persons were thrown into a panic when the storm rocked the structure and twisted and slanted its steeple.

Three ice houses were wrecked, and numerous homes and other buildings were unroofed. Trees were blown down, and electric light wires brought a death peril until Corporal Dodge of the State police raced on his motorcycle to Providence to notify the power company to cut off the current.

All lighting and telephone service was disrupted. Everything was chaos until this morning.

North Duxbury, Aug. 1.—Twenty-five or more buildings here were damaged or destroyed by a severe windstorm, and trees and poles were blown down. An unoccupied house disappeared from the town and was supposed to have been blown into the woods. W. E. Nickerson's barn was blown high in the air leaving an auto intact on the ground.

BISHOP'S RAP AT DIVORCE STIRS PARIS INTEREST

Paris, Aug. 31 (I.N.S.).—Attention is centered today on Bishop Manning's attack on Paris divorces for Americans. His statement that the ease with which rich Americans obtain Paris divorces is "a dishonor to France" comes at a time when several Paris newspapers have been campaigning against the divorce laws and when divorce courts have been making decisions with greater care.

"These divorces are helping to make a mockery of marriage and constitute one of the greatest menaces of our life." Bishop Manning declared. He declared trial marriage would "not be marriages at all, but harlotry."

NAVY RESUMES CONTROL OF GREAT OIL RESERVES

Washington, Aug. 1 (A.P.).—The Navy Department today resumed control of its oil reserves, ending a five-year period of administration by the Interior Department, by executive order of President Coolidge of March 17 last. Mr. Coolidge rescinded the order of President Harding of May 31, 1921, which placed the lands under the Interior Department.

Under Harding's order, former Interior Secretary Fall leased the Teapot Dome and Elks Hills naval reserves to Harry F. Sinclair and Edward L. Doheny, oil capitalists, which caused one of the greatest scandals and investigations in the country's history.

BUD, LENA TO TRAVEL FOR YEAR

Rich Bridegroom Then Will Study Medicine at Harvard, He Tells Reporters

New York, Aug. 1 (I.N.S.).—"Bud" Stillman and his bride, the former Lena Wilson, sailed early today for Europe aboard the White Star liner Olympic.

James A. Stillman, Sr., was on hand to say farewell. He left just before the vessel sailed. Hailing a friend on the pier he explained with an airy wave of the hand, "just down to see my kids off."

"Bud" told reporters freely of the plans of himself and his bride. He said:

"We are going first to Paris. I'm taking my car, and we'll motor through Europe. We expect to be away five months.

"I don't expect to study medicine at Harvard next year, for I'll probably spend a year in travel and will begin my medical course a year later."

The young bride looked extremely attractive in a brown and gold costume. She also wore a tight little brown hat and a white silk scarf tipped with orange around her throat.

15,000 LOSE ALL CAR SERVICE

New York, Aug. 1 (A.P.)—Refusal of New York city to pay a $175,000 bill for electric current has deprived 15,000 Staten Island commuters of trolley service.

Comptroller Berry refused to approve the bill because the municipal-operated lines have failed to make expenses and he objected to the difference being met by taxation.

The Staten Island Edison Company as a result shut off the power today.

The city prepared to meet the situation by rushing emergency busses to the island, which, however, will operate on a ten-cent fare in place of the nickel trolley fare.

VOTE TO DISBAND G. A. R. POST OF SIX MEMBERS

Plainville, Aug. 1 (A.P.).—George H. Maintain Post, G. A. R., has voted to disband. It is reduced to six members in three towns and meetings were infrequent.

Mrs. Richard Barton acted as quartermaster for many years, owing to the impaired health of her father, H. Eugene Coombs.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 2. Declarer makes game certain by the seemingly unnecessary expedient of allowing East to hold the first Diamond trick, thus providing for the possibility of East's holding four Diamonds and West none. Had Dummy taken the first Diamond trick, but three Diamond tricks could have been made and game could not have been won. As played, six Diamond tricks are assured which, with the Ace of Clubs and the Ace and King of Hearts are sufficient for game.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

NEW DRY HEAD PLEADS FOR 'A SOBER AMERICA'

Washington, Aug. 1 (A.P.).—Formally taking over the office of enforcement chief, Seymour Lowman of New York today declared "our greatest job is to hold down the activities of the radical wets and the radical drys."

"Temperance and sobriety are commendable virtues," he said. "We want a sober America."

Mr. Lowman, a former Lieutenant-Governor of New York, was sworn in at the Treasury to succeed Lincoln C. Andrews as Assistant Secretary in charge of dry law operations.

"I am looking for honest, efficient enforcement of the prohibition law, just the same as other United States laws are enforced," he said. "Disloyalty will not be tolerated. I have no policy except to carry out the mandates of Congress."

Assistant Secretary Andrews turned over "a splendid organization for effective work when he resigned," Mr. Lowman said.

"Both the Coast Guard and the customs services, which have been greatly augmented, are making it very difficult to smuggle liquor into the United States."

MORE CLOUDS TOMORROW: RISING TEMPERATURE

For the coming thirty-six hours New England will be dominated by tail-end flourishes of the week-end rainstorm, now centred in Quebec, and a slight rise in temperature is predicted to accentuate the mugginess.

Forecast for Boston and vicinity: Partly cloudy tonight and Tuesday, probably with showers; slightly warmer tonight; moderate south to west winds.

BRUCE GLAD TO SEE EXPOSE OF DRY LEAGUE

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 1.—Declaring that it remained for the Hearst newspapers to lay bare the truth in the long suspected sinister activities of the Anti-Saloon League in browbeating congressmen and members of other legislative bodies and collecting enormous sums of money for feeing its hireling propagandants, U. S. Senator William Cabell Bruce, in a letter published in the Baltimore American today, praises the great expose of the league recently published in the Boston Evening American and other Hearst newspapers.

"No single contribution of greater value has been made to anti-prohibition literature," says Senator Bruce in his letter which follows:

BULLYING CONGRESS.

"To the editor of the Baltimore American:

"I have read with the very keenest pleasure the disclosures relating to the Anti-Saloon League which have recently appeared in your columns. No single contribution of greater value has been made to anti-prohibition literature.

"We knew that the league had been busily engaged in cajoling, browbeating and bullying members of Congress and other legislative bodies and that it had collected and disbursed enormous sums of money for the purpose of feeing its hireling propagandants, of electing candidates for office friendly to its aims and of defeating candidates unfriendly to them.

LEAGUE AND JUDGES.

"We even suspected that it had, secretly, exerted its energies to influence judicial and other appointments connected with the administration of the Volstead act.

"But it remained for the Hearst newspapers to bring us nearer to the full truth than we had ever been. Partly political, partly clerical in its character—that is to say, political enough to desecrate the church and clerical enough to threaten the independence of the State—the League has vainly endeavored to reconcile high moral pretensions with conduct utterly devoid of moral dignity. Never, it is safe to say, did any league that claimed to be reformatory in its objects pursue methods for advancing those objects more closely akin to the squalid or shady side of ordinary political activity.

The Three Musketeers — By Alexandre Dumas

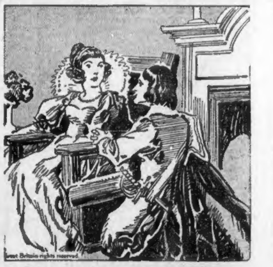
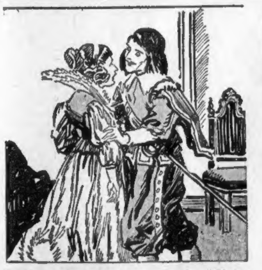
© 1927, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Milady de Winter was infatuated with a young nobleman, the Count de Wardes. D'Artagnan intercepted a note from her to the Count and took the latter's place at a rendezvous. In the darkness the deception succeeded. But when d'Artagnan told Athos, the older man warned him against Milady, who was the Cardinal's spy.

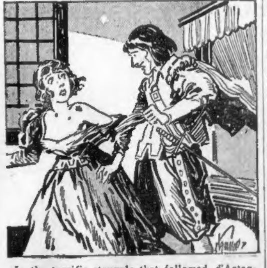


Great Britain rights reserved.

Alarmed by Athos' warning, d'Artagnan—still pretending to be de Wardes—wrote a note impolitely declining another interview. Milady was furious. She invited d'Artagnan to visit her, and promised him her love if he would kill de Wardes. D'Artagnan, almost believing the story himself, agreed to do as she wished.



Having received d'Artagnan's promise, Milady played her part so well that the young man believed that she really loved him. Struck with remorse at the trick he had played on her, he finally confessed that he had pretended to be de Wardes. Furiously, Milady sprang away from him, shrieking that she would kill him.



In the terrific struggle that followed, d'Artagnan clutched at her robe and, as she leaped away, it tore from her white shoulder. Horrified, he saw that she was branded! He rushed from the house, to tell Athos of his discovery. Milady was the beautiful wife Athos thought he had killed!

METROPOLITAN PRESENTS FILM COMEDY

While motion picture producers have been searching frantically for new comedy ideas, Raymond Griffith, the high hat comedian, has gone out, collared two and put them both into one picture.

The result is "Time to Love" at the Metropolitan. It is Griffith's funniest comedy.

In it, the star has taken such an abstract thing as spiritualism and such a very real thing as four captive balloons and combined them in a hilarious photoplay that runs from light comedy, through farce, burlesque, romance, to the broadest slapstick.

It is a mixture, but the romance and the star's extraordinary sense of comedy, carry it along and knit it tightly into the most laugh-provoking farce that has flashed on the "Met" screen in some months.

Griffith plays with the spook idea gently. His sweetheart believes in spirits, so, honor-bound never to see her again, he reappears as a spirit. There are a score of laughs in this part of the picture, but when he and the girl, escaping from their pursuers, get carried up in a balloon that is being shot at by soldiers on the ground, the laughs become roars.

Neck Now a Verb, Asserts Actor at Tremont

Modern distortions of the King's English have forced certain changes in the dictionary, quothe Charles Irwin of "A La Carte" at the Tremont Theatre.

"The word skirt," he says, "used to denote a garment, now it's an abbreviation: neck was a noun, but now it is a verb."

WESTERN FILM AT MODERN THEATRE

Melodramo of the West and East mingles to provide variety in the two first-run photoplays at the Modern and Beacon.

The top-liner is the Paramount picturing of Richard Gates' story of the Western cattle country, "The Last Outlaw," starring Gary Cooper with Jack Luden and Betty Jewel in the cast.

The companion picture is a version of Hazel Livingston's story, "The Secret Studio," the cast comprising Olive Gorden, Walter McGrail, Margaret Livinghton and Ben Bard.

The Vitaphone program adds its bounty in three artists' presentations of Sissle & Blake, stars of "Suffle Along," in a smart skit; Isa Kremer, ballad interpreter in the manner of Raquel Meller, in a diversified program, and Fleeson & Baxter, vaudeville stars in an operatic satire.

Newton police officials were asked to help in the search to locate Swan Norden, 58, of No. 54 Evergreen avenue, Auburndale who has been missing since Tuesday. Norden is described as being light, bald headed, and about six feet tall. When last seen he wore a brown coat, black pants, black shoes, a soft hat, a gingham shirt and black socks.

HUB AIRPORT IS SEEN AS AID TO SHIPPING

"Providential" was the train of circumstances which led to the abandonment of the project for marine docks at East Boston and the development of the Airport in its stead, says Manager Frank S. Davis of the Boston Maritime Association.

It will soon be practical for Chicago residents to hop off to Boston on the day a transatlantic steamship leaves New York, land at the Boston Airport and hop off once more in time to catch the vessel off Nantucket.

By FRANK S. DAVIS,
Manager, Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Occasionally Boston's much criticised conservatism is a blessing in disguise. It is providential that the plan for the development and utilization of the filled in area at Jeffries Point, upon which more than two and one-half millions have been expended to date, as a great steamship terminal, was not carried out.

Frank S. Davis

Had this been done Boston would not be in the position it is today to make of this East Boston area the greatest and most conveniently situated airport in America, if our people see fit to embrace the opportunity.

The Boston Evening American is doing a great work in stimulating interest in this enterprise and the policy of this great Boston newspaper in vigorously calling attention to the need of action on the part of our State and municipal authorities in developing and improving East Boston airport is most commendable.

LIGHTING NEEDED.

A State commission recently appointed by Governor Fuller is now engaged in making a study to determine what the future policy of the Commonwealth should be in respect to aviation, and particularly what improvements and expenditures are necessary in order to make the East Boston airport measure up to present requirements and what may reasonably be needed in the future.

Without doubt this commission will recommend that the East Boston airport be marked and illuminated with the most improved method known and thus far adopted in the science of aviation.

One of the chief difficulties in connection with the Boston airport is the need of more adequate transportation facilities between the airport and the city proper. It would be most unwise for the Federal government, Commonwealth, or the city to spend a large sum for the purpose of developing the East Boston airport unless construction of a bridge or tunnel across the harbor is speeded up and actually started.

NATURAL ADVANTAGES.

Our airport has natural strategic advantages in location superior to those of any other point on the seaboard, not even excepting New York and vicinity. Steamships plying between New York and European ports on their eastbound trips leave our seaboard at a point off Nantucket, and the average time is 12 to 15 hours after departure from New York, before they shape a course to sea off Nantucket. Westbound steamships take a similar course, skirting our seaboard from Nantucket to New York.

It can thus be seen that with the flying time by airplane between New York and Boston about two hours, a passenger leaving New York by airplane could overtake a steamship off the Massachusetts coast, even though the latter had eight or ten hours' start. A similar saving could be effected in the handling of mail.

Airplanes in the near future will naturally supplement our present rail and steamship service. The Boston airport would be the natural destination of passengers from interior points, such as Chicago, traveling by airplane who might wish to intercept incoming or outgoing steamships after they depart from or aproach our shore.

One could almost leave Chicago for Boston by airplane simultaneously with the departure of the steamship from New York, and be put on board the steamer from the East Boston airport at a point off the Massachusetts coast. Likewise passengers and mail could be taken from incoming steamships by airplane and reach Chicago about the time the steamship arrived at New York.

JEWISH PRAISE FOR BRISBANE

Chicago, Aug. 1.—"Arthur Brisbane, leading editorial writer of the Hearst newspapers and writer of the column 'Today,' is the greatest friend the Jews in America and the world ever had," according to a leading article published in the local Daily Jewish Courier, one of the oldest Yiddish publications in the country.

James B. Loebner, commissioner of State normal schools and a writer of note, managing editor of the Courier, is the author of the article.

"The Jews in America always felt the warmth of the tender soul of this genius of the pen, Arthur Brisbane," says Mr. Loebner in his article.

"The apology of Ford, which was a blow to the anti-Semitic movement throughout the world, was largely due to the activities and hard work of Mr. Brisbane. But he remained modest and never wished credit for himself, ascribing the credit to others.

"The name of Arthur Brisbane will be written into the glorious book of Jewish history and will be remembered for many centuries to follow."

Beauty and Safety

Are two essentials of the perfect permanent. A beautiful wave we must have, but also we must be sure that not one hair of our precious locks will be sacrificed on beauty's altar.

This Permanent of Beauty and Safety is always to be found at the Poll Parrot Beauty Salons, at 177 Tremont St. (Congress 6775), 41 Winter St. (Congress 5846) and 40 Scollay Sq. (Haymarket 2903).

Here you may have a genuine Nestle Circuline wave at a special Summer rate which includes the all-important testing with the Text-o-Meter. Success is guaranteed for even dyed, bleached or gray hair.

There are over 100 chairs and 30 booths in the combined Poll Parrot Shops, all filled with delighted customers who depend on this, New England's largest beauty salon for expert waves, rejuvenating facials, scientific shampoos, skilled finger waves and successful dyeing, tinting and bleaching by the Nestine system. Best of all, a free dandruff treatment for every customer.

You've All Heard

Of Rae Samoff. Probably you've all longed—perhaps dared hope—that some day you might be transformed from just an everyday girl into a beautiful butterfly of fashion through the magic of a Rae Samoff gown. And now your hope may be realized — and so much more reasonably than you dared dream!

For Rae Samoff has two or three hundred gowns which she is sacrificing for the season's closing at prices far below the actual cost of the gorgeously glorious materials. Three piece costumes, dinner frocks, two piece sports effects, dainty summery dream dresses, smart black satins for advance Fall wear. I stayed for hours and reveled in each dress, every one a masterpiece of exquisite material, perfect taste, authentic, lasting style, and fine workmanship. Every one picked out, oh, so carefully, by Rae Samoff herself from the cream of the New York salons. Many of them formerly well over the hundred mark, now all $20 to $49.50. Anne, I beg of you don't pass up this opportunity of a lifetime! At Rae Samoff's, on the 9th floor of the Blake Bldg., 59 Temple Place.

Practical Polly

Persistently pursues bargains. She knows how to make a dollar do the work of two—and she's good enough to give me the credit.

Take curtains, for instance. She has just furnished the living and dining rooms of her Summer cottage with the most adorable voile curtains. Creamy hard twisted voile (permanently crisp) with generously full ruffles, rayon edged in dainty colors, complete with tie backs. The crowning value is in the double ruffled all-the-way-across valance. Elsewhere, these curtains are $2.50—without the valance. At the Seasonal Sale Store, at 54 Chauncy Street, they are $2, complete with valance and tie backs. The dainty edging of blue, rose, gold, green or lavender rayon is guaranteed sunfast, so, after a happy Summer these curtains will move to Winter quarters in Polly's city bedroom. And forth and back, for many a year.

"I Never Dreamed

Such dresses could be found even at a clearance sale at such low prices!" exclaimed Frances, when I took her in to see Evelyn, third floor of No. 8 Winter Street.

The dress you want at the price you want to pay is certainly waiting for you at this popular shop. Oh, such beauties, Anne — everything in the entire place marked down — to $5.95, $8.95 and $10.95. Broken sizes and shades, of course, but something for every one from a 16 to a 44 —and every frock a wonder value. $8.95 buys smart sports dresses, two piece and two toned jerseys, sleeveless crepes, embroidered radiums, and printed silks. For $5.95 the prettiest of sleeveless crepe de chines in pastel shades, or smartly tailored pongees in larger sizes. And for $10.95 — flowered chiffons, lace and georgette combinations, all over tucked crepe de chines — dresses for sports, business or dress wear, at real savings.

Listen, World!

To the tale of two extra special friends of mine that I met yesterday. Both on the eve of vacations. One whirling like a dainty dervish in a mad flurry of belated shopping, delayed hotel confirmations and doubtful Pullman reservations. The other, scheduled for a trip "Over There" with the Legion, sweetly serene, with every plan perfected. Why the difference? It's easy! One took advantage of the wonderful Personal Service Department conducted by Filene's. Not only will the Travel Bureau of this department make hotel and travel reservations for you, without charge, furnish timetables, hotel literature and helpful suggestions, but it will even purchase your tickets and help plan your wardrobe. The efficient manager of this Personal Service Department, listed for Madge a complete travel outfit suitable for every occasion on the trip overseas—and which, could be comfortably packed in a suitcase and hatbox! Tickets for sightseeing busses may also be secured at this convenient bureau. Whether you have two hours or a week to spend in the Hub, you may learn here how to make the most of every hour. Umbrellas loaned in sudden showers, needle and thread furnished for emergency sewing, the selling of stamps and express money orders as well as concert and theatre tickets without additional premium—these are just a few of the friendly helps graciously extended by this efficient Personal Service Department, on the first floor balcony of Filene's.

I've Won!

Won permission to tell you of an opportunity to get a permanent of personality at a most reliable beauty salon, AND a pair of those real Venetian pure glove silk French panties for the already reduced Summer price of $12 for the permanent alone! Mertin's (3rd floor, Dexter Bldg., 453 Washington St.) have made an arrangement with a smart Tremont St. shop to give an order for 1 pair of these lovely panties ($2.95 value) to every reader of this column who has a Mertin permanent this month. And a Mertin permanent means the big, soft, sweeping undulations only produced by a hair and scalp specialist of high reputation. The panties are of the same high quality as the permanent—of heaviest silk, in exquisite pastel shades. It's my own idea, Anne, and I do hope my friends will show their approval by telephoning this very day to Congress 1088 for their appointment.

A Woman Is Known

By the luggage she carries. And really there's no excuse for dilapidated bags, trunks and hatboxes, when they are selling at such very reasonable prices at Josiah Cummings & Sons, right down at 653-659 Atlantic Ave., opposite the South Station, just 'round the corner from Summer St.

This concern has been known in Boston for over 82 years as headquarters for better baggage at modest prices. Right now they are having a particularly interesting sale of the better grade trunks, bags and week-end cases, used for window displays and reduced 25% to 50%. (The bags start at $5.) Free initials and free delivery within 50 miles.

And you really must go down to look at the beautiful English pigskin card cases and pass cases. Josiah Cummings & Sons import their own English leather, which is why they can afford to sell such superior merchandise so reasonably. All kinds of luggage repaired at moderate prices, too.

Put Your Best Foot

Forward, Anne, in a pair of the stunning new black satin cut-out pumps at Dr. Saul's, my competent podiatrist-chiropodist, on the 3rd floor of the New Studio Building, Room 312, 110 Tremont St.

These "health shoes," with comfy, built in arch supports, so slim, and snappy, are a perfect shoe for dancing or dressy wear—and even in the triple E widths slenderly stylish. At $8 this is truly a bargain. And at the same price—shoes for every Summer purpose, shoes that transfer you from a member of the piazza brigade into the front ranks of youth and gaiety. No wonder folks travel from Cape Cod, the Berkshires, and the Maine lakes for fittings at Dr. Saul's. And for his special foot treatments, too. Stubborn corns and callouses are routed, and by skilful massage he brings you complete foot comfort. For real foot health, I recommend the combination of Dr. Saul's Shoes and Dr. Saul's scientific treatments. Open Saturdays.

Boston Is Proud

Of Lila. Proud of her standard in hats. Proud that she never allows a single ordinary hat to enter her stock. Personality—that's the difference between a Lila hat and others. And now Lila is in Paris, selecting Fall models — and her entire stock now on hand is going to be sold at one fell swoop for—it's so little for a Lila hat—but the truth must out—just $3.

The most significant piece of news I could give you, my dear—for we all know that these hats have been selling right along at $15, some up to $22.50. Exquisite, one of a kind models, large and small headsizes. Felts, viscas, satins, bengalines, fabrics suitable for year round wear. New York sport hats, lovely all over embroidered effects. Go to see these early, Anne. They won't last long. At Lila's Hat Shoppe, at 41 Winter St., 5th floor.

Do Birds Fly?

Do Mrs. Young's and Billie's friends like the permanent waves they get at the French Beauty Shop on the 3rd floor of the New Studio Bldg., 110 Tremont St.? They certainly do—for it's a genuine Nestle Circuline Wave—the wave of their dreams, wide, soft, glossy and becomingly trained to the contour of the face—and so skillfully that the hair remains alive, gleaming and healthy!

To accommodate the many who are anxious to take advantage of the Summer reduction, the special price of $10 has been extended to August 31. And a word to the wise. I peeped into the appointment book, and from its looks, I'd advise any one planning to have a wave this month to telephone right in to Congress 8166, and avoid disappointment. August is an extra [illegible] month at the French Shop, and with the added attraction of this extremely low price, it's certainly advisable to "phone early and avoid the rush."

Weep No More

Anne, because little Elizabeth's locks are losing their lovely golden sheen. There's a new, harmless, modern method of safeguarding the sunny shimmer of children's hair that shows a tendency to early darkening. The same imported bottled sunshine that mother uses to keep the natural loveliness of her own blond hair or to bring out gorgeous henna tones in darker locks, may be safely used on daughter's soft curls. Of course, it's Flozor, the Les Quandieu product—the only preparation that's not a dye and that will permanently preserve or restore the sunshine to darkened hair. Distilled from camomile blossoms, the secret of the gorgeously golden, gleaming waves of literally thousands of society, stage and screen stars. Flosor may be found only at the toilet goods counter of Meyer Jonasson's, Tremont and Boylston Sts. A $2.50 bottle is sufficient for a year's use.

Gone Are the Days

When we thought sunburns were becoming. But if we do burn, there's a quick route to normal creaminess through a refreshing ice pack bleach at Helen Cook's Beauty Shop, 3rd floor of the New Studio Bldg., 110 Tremont St. An investment in beauty for any one, particularly the tanned or sun-kissed.

You'll enjoy one of her heavenly facials, too, and the transforming loveliness of her finger waves. But the very brightest star in Helen's crown is her marvellous Le Mur permanent waves. We must step in, Anne, and see one taken off the wavers. Soft as silk, simply running a comb through a Helen Cook permanent calls forth a perfect, rippling marcel that seldom requires "setting" for months and months. Why, oh why, should there be a single scraggly, stringy head left in all Boston when Miss Cook is making a Summer price of $10 for this regular $15 wave? Do broadcast the news, Anne. Her telephone is Congress 7839.

Now Up We Go

To see the wonderful collection of dresses that Miss Wiggin has marked to $9.95 for quick clearance. It's really an astonishing price, Anne, for dresses of such smart style, lovely materials and superior workmanship

Whether you are looking for a sports dress, an attractive, cool frock for business or a fluffy dream dress for Summer dances, you are sure to find it at Miss Wiggin's Rooms 304-305 Fabyan Building, 26 West St., at this special sale. There are filmy flowered georgettes, white crepes smartly pin tucked, quaint printed silks, flat crepes in figured or flowered effects, georgettes embellished with cut work—and all so freshly dainty—just beckoning to you to buy them to add the finishing touch of happiness to your Summer.

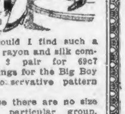
Most of the dresses run from 16-38 or 40, but there are quite a few beauties in size 42. No matter what else we pass up, Anne, we mustn't miss this very special sale for it's not once in a blue moon that you will find such frocks at anywhere near this remarkable price of $9.95!

Oh, Anne!

Do tell Bess that she needn't give up her hope of having a permanent this Summer because she simply hasn't a soul to leave the baby with. For the convenience of just such customers, and for the business girls as well, Helen Lynch will make evening appointments in her dainty shop on that popular 3rd floor of the New Studio Bldg., 110 Tremont St. John will feel more than repaid for a solitary evening with the heir of the house when he sees how a Frederick permanent by Helen Lynch will transform Bess. I suppose much of the magic of these lovely waves lies in the reliable Frederick machine, but much, too, I am sure, is due to Helen's deft fingers which wind every hair with such care and skill. Her reduced Summer price of $12 includes the shampoo and "setting," and it's really very little for such a superior wave. The phone is Liberty 0036.

An Economical Answer

To the Summer hosiery problem for Mother, Brother, Dad and the Modern Maid is found right in the Norfolk Hosiery Shop, on the street floor arcade of the Little Bldg., 80 Boylston St.



I just stepped in to look — and I stopped to buy one whole dozen pair of socks for the Big Boy and his Dad. For where else could I find such a firmly woven rayon and silk combination at 3 pair for 69c? Snappy colorings for the Big Boy and more conservative pattern for Dad.

And because there are no size 10s in one particular group, women's beautiful full fashioned pure silk stockings, regularly $1.65 a pair, are going at 2 pair for $1.55. Mostly in the darker shades of gray, rose taupe, toast, toreador and tans, with plenty of black, these are a rare value for the conservative woman. And for daughter, sheer service chiffon, silk way above the knee, full fashioned, in every new shade except white, at 2 pair for $1.85, or $1 a pair. Need I say more?

'And Now, Dear 'Anne

The hour has come to say good bye—and on to my daily appointment with Virozol — the royal road to eternal charm.

The Virozol Astringent magically revives my wilted spirits and tired lines at the end of a hectic day. It cleanses so delightfully, and leaves me so fresh and cool and stimulated. It really does seem magic, Anne, the way this Swedish face bath transforms your weary, dusty skin into a living, blooming thing. In just a few days the little network of wrinkles are smoothed out and one's brow becomes clear, serene and untroubled. Part of the magic is due of course to the Virozol Almond Cream, the finishing touch of a Virozol treatment. Don't let your supply run low, Anne. You'll find the Virozol Astringent at $1 and the Almond Cream at $1.25 at any of the three Poll Parrot Beauty Salons at 177 Tremont St., 41 Winter St. and 40 Scollay Square.

Big Hearted Mr. Rhem Did It to Save Alex Laugh That Off

Girls and Records When Glory Fades Boxing Has No Charity

By Nick Flatley

PINCH DRINKING OFFERS NEW SPORT ALIBI

Nick Flatley

FLINT RHEM, suspended Cardinal pitcher, comes out with an alibi that would seem to pack endless possibilities. A bunch of the boys were whooping it up, according to the story, in a Philadelphia saloon. Yes, they have 'em in Philly, too. Flint was one of the bunch.

So, too, was Grover Cleveland Alexander, the venerable pitcher who was such a hero in the last world series. Grover trained in the old days, and he knows how to whoop it up. He was having too many, entirely, for such a famous pitcher, so the heroic Mister Rhem proceeded to grab his drinks.

"I did it to save good old Alex," he explained.

That was true sacrifice. Mister Rhem had a clause in his contract which prohibited drinking, but he cast aside all thought of self when he saw the old giant of the hill tottering and about to fall.

His line will probably take its place in the chronicles of the game along with Eddie Cicotte's noted reply: "I did it for the wife and kiddies."

It will be a hard-hearted club owner who will not temper justice with mercy in the case of such a generous minded and noble athlete as Mister Rhem.

Here is a new excuse all made to order. The Harvard quarterback who drops a punt can say afterwards that he did it to save good old Tad Jones. Jack Sharkey probably turned his chin for Dempsey to save dear old Tex Rickard. And your correspondent picked the wrong fighter in the last row to save the other boys from being shown up disgracefully

It might not be a bad idea for the club owner to send scribes along with their star players, so that the young men might do the drinking for the heroes. That would make up in part for the agony of watching the boys lose.

A TITLE FIGHT IS A SMALL SQUARE COMPLETELY SURROUNDED BY DOLLARS.

NEW YORK IS BARNUMVILLE, SURE ENOUGH. IMAGINE THE BOYS SQUAWKING FOR A CHANCE TO PAY $50 FOR FIGHT TICKETS.

THE GIRLS KEEP RIGHT ON CRACKING RECORDS

MARTHA NORELIUS carelessly shatters six swimming records in a single meet. Year by year the girls hang up new marks. The limit seems to be reached Then a new marvel appears, and marks fall like leaves in an Autumn gale

The girls have been interested seriously in sport for a short matter of five years or so. Slowly but surely they are getting close to the men's records. It will not be many years before the sexes are on even terms in the sports which the women take up.

They have too much sense to go in for boxing or football or the other tough games. But in tennis, golf, swimming and track they are coming along with a remarkable surge. We may see in our own day some Glenna Collett playing a Bobby Jones for the open golf crown, or a Helen Wills battling a Bill Tilden for the tennis title.

LANDIS WANTS AN AIRPLANE. HE MIGHT GET ONE FROM SOME OF THE BRAVE PITCHERS.

CHARITY AND BOXING ARE FAR APART

FREDDIE WELSH, international hero a few years ago, dies penniless and deserted in New York. This young man had wealth, and friends by the thousand, when he was champion And he was a great champion. But when the honors were taken away he was promptly forgotten

Boxing is the most heartless of all the sports. The stars in other games are cared for generally when they come on hard times after their day is done. The fighters just sink out of sight, back to their beginnings, and that's the end of them

The ring champions have been making big money for quite a few years, but until the present crop appeared mighty few of them saved anything. Bat Nelson is hanging around, living from hand to mouth Ad Wolgast is in a sanatorium out in the West, broke and training for his next imaginary fight.

Real scrappers are merciless when they're getting up. They have to kill, so to speak, to reach the heights. They find just as little charity in their world, when they start down the slippery chutes of the years.

NORTH SHORE TENNIS PLAY OFF AUGUST 29

The scheduled final round matches of the North Shore tennis championships in women's doubles and mixed doubles at the Tedesco Club, Swampscott, yesterday, were washed out by the rain and as a result, have been postponed until the week of August 29. At that time all the players concerned will be back in Boston for the national doubles championships at Longwood, and they will be able to make a trip down to Tedesco to settle matters there.

Voigt's Fate to Be Known Soon

Cleveland, O., Aug. 1 (A P)—The executive committee of the United States Golf Association today considered the amateur standing of George Voigt, Washington, and while they evidently reached a decision they said the ruling would be announced in New York later this week

President William C. Fownes of the United States Golf Association refused to say what the decision had been, but indicated the subject was discussed thoroughly for some time

The committee also went over the amateur standing of nearly 200 entrants for the national amateur tournament to be held in Minneapolis next month.

ALLISON RANKED NO. 1 IN COLLEGE NET RATINGS

New York, Aug. 1 (I N S).—Wilmer L. Allison, of the University of Texas, intercollegiate single tennis champion is ranked No. 1 in the intercollegiate ratings, announced by the United States Lawn Tennis Association. John Van Ryn, Princeton, is second.

In the doubles the Princeton team of Van Ryn and Kenneth Appel is ranked No. 1 and the Occidental combination, B. Gorchakoff and N. Craig, is second.

EX-CHAMP THREE UP ON FIELD

Bristol, Ct., Star Has Card of 69 in N. E. G. P. O. Tourney at Commonwealth C. C.

By BILL GRIMES.

Over a rain-soaked course Herbert C. Lagerblade of Bristol, Ct., former champion, shot a 69 at the Commonwealth Country Club today and is leading the field in the annual New England Professional Golfers' organization championship.

Lagerblade was out in 35 and back in 34 and was the only one in the field to break par. Lagerblade's only slip on his outward round was on the fifth hole but as he had birdies on the second and seventh he was one under par at the turn. After taking a five on the twelfth he got a birdie two on the thirteenth and came home in 34.

Lagerblade's card

Out	4	3	5	4	5	3	3	4	4—35
In	4	4	5	2	4	4	3	5	3—34	—69

Three strokes behind Lagerblade are Tom Mahan, Willie Ogg, Jack Gray and Ralph Thomas. Mahan got off to a bad start with a six on the first and four on the second, but was 38 at the turn and then he raced home in 34.

Mahan's card

Out	6	4	5	2	4	4	4	5	4—38
In	3	3	5	4	4	4	4	4	3—34	—72

Willie Ogg had nine fours on his outward round and was even fours coming in with a five on the 15th and a six on the 17th.

Ogg's card

In	3	3	5	4	3	5	3	6	4—36	—72

Jack Gray of Wollaston would have been [illegible] title [illegible] had he been able to get his putter working. He was one over par on the third, fifth and sixth going out and had used up 38 strokes when he reached the turn. He came back in fine style having a 34 with fives on the 14th and 17th.

Gray's card —

Out	4	4	6	3	5	4	4	4	4—38
In	3	3	5	3	4	5	3	5	3—34	—72

Ralph Thomas of Sandy Burr after using up 41 strokes going to the turn raced home in 31, which was 3 strokes better than any inward round this morning. During the journey home Thomas had no less than five 3s.

Dave Hackney, the defending champion, had a 73 after taking 39 to the turn. Hackney was on his way to make the best inward round until he reached the home hole. On the 18th tee, Hackney needed a three for a 31 which would have given him a 70 for the round but he lost his ball and came up with a five.

Tommy White, the assistant professional at the entertaining club, had an 84, one of the poorest rounds he has had on this course this season, but he had the distinction of being the only one in the field to get a hole in one. Tommy holed out his mashie shot at the 11th.

Hayes names a [illegible] of minor but trying duties—[illegible] mail that might have proved annoying to Dempsey, getting rid of unwelcome callers, going to [illegible] for taking Carpentier fight films to Boston, and impersonating Jack Kearns, Dempsey's former manager, in Dempsey's [illegible] when Kearns was out of town.

Dempsey's attorneys declare the present action is inspired by Kearns to embarrass Dempsey.

The birdie was made first. Her drive on the second hole struck an inquisitive bird and knocked its head off. The ball kept on its flight and landed in such an advantageous position that Miss Orcutt was able to score a four, which is par for the hole.

SOX BEGIN TO SHOW CLASS

Carrigan Clan Is Steadying Down—Entertain Three Teams This Week

The Red Sox are arriving. Bill Carrigan's long patience is being rewarded. During the past week the Carrigan Clan showed marked improvement.

Except for a lapse in Saturday's second game, when the local defense collapsed, it was the outstanding week of the season for Manager Carrigan and his men on the home lot. Top notch teams have their bad days afield so the one flop of the Sox in a strenuous week is excusable.

With the class of Carrigan's youths or his boy scouts, as some of the boys call them, coming to the surface, fans may expect to see even a higher grade of ball staged at the local orchard this week. By a curious turn of the schedule three American League teams will be seen in action this week.

The St Louis Browns finish up their series here today and tomorrow. On Wednesday the Chicago White Sox breeze in for three days and then for the week end George Moriarty's Toothless Tigers will be the local attraction.

THE Sox are beginning to win ball games because the pitchers are tightening up, the fielding for the most part has been steady and the attack vicious in spots. One of the attractive qualities of the Sox in the last six days has been their ability to hit in pinches. Then, too, the team under Bill Carrigan and Heinie Wagner has been fighting back. Fans like a team that can come from behind. The Sox turned in this stunt no less than four times last week.

Outstanding in the work of the Red Sox for the week was the excellently pitched game against Cleveland by Danny McFayden, the Somerville youth. It must have given Manager Carrigan plenty of satisfaction to see Danny shut out Cleveland with six hits. In his long connection with baseball Carrigan has never taken such keen interest in the development of a young pitcher as he is with young Danny McFayden. Bill says Danny has the heart, the stuff and the brain and experience will do the rest.

Charlie Ruffing's snappily pitched game against the Browns was another indication that the pitching staff is rounding to form. Ruffing's change of pace from now on is going to be a big factor. Charlie's fast ball is a whiz and his slow one a tantalizer. Ruffing is one of the few pitchers with fine control of his slow one.

Slim Harriss is steadying down and is bound to be a big help. Young Jack Russell is the pitcher that catches the fancy of the fans. Russell looks like a great prospect.

CARRIGAN is well fortified behind the bat with Grover Hartley, Fred Hofman, two veterans, and young Billy Moore. Jack Rothrock is no Hal Chase around first but he covers the bag acceptably. Jack is clouting the apple to a fare thee well and looks the part of an ideal lead off man. He bats both ways.

Bill Regan at second, Buddy Myer at short and Red Rollings are working together like a machine. Carrigan's present outfield looks like his best with Walter Shaner in left, Pete Flagstead in center and Cleo Carlyle in right.

Carrigan has finally hit upon a combination that is bound to win a lot of games.

The Sox still retain their hustle, and this is the one factor that's winning back a lot of fans to the Sox. A losing team that hustles will be forgiven, but never a team that dogs it when things are breaking tough.

JACK DEMPSEY Tells of Comeback

(Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

ONE of the newspaper fellows who does a lot of experting, and who thought I was just going to be a "push-over" for Jack Sharkey, has taken the position since the fight that "the bout was marred by eternal clinching."

If there was "eternal clinching" in that fight it's a big surprise to me, and I guess it'll be just as much of a surprise to Sharkey and to the referee.

For I believe that the referee will bear me out in the statement that Sharkey's fight and mine was freer from clinching than any seven-round heavyweight battle that's been staged in New York for quite a few years.

I don't know how often that referee had to break us, but I don't recall that it was more than ten times, at the very most—and that's an average of less than twice a round.

That writer, expert though he may be on this and that, and as expert as he might be on other things, does not seem to get the right slant as to the difference between CLINCHING and IN-FIGHTING.

A clinch means when both fighters are LOCKED TOGETHER and neither is doing any hitting. It means both are just holding on and doing nothing in particular except to take a little rest on each other's shoulders and stalling around for the final bell to end their evening's work.

IN-FIGHTING is something radically different, even if the particular reporter did not know the difference and gave his readers a wrong idea.

IN-FIGHTING means fighting at close range. It may mean that the fighters each have one arm around the other, but it also means that the other arm is FREE and that the other arm is being used for HITTING. And when fighters are HITTING they are NOT CLINCHING.

The fight game calls for a man to HIT. Naturally, he can hit with but one hand at a time whether he is engaged in IN-FIGHTING or fighting out in the open.

The man who says that there was "eternal clinching" in Sharkey's fight and mine is wrong—and he knows it, or he does not know the technical angles of the game in which he is supposed to be an expert. The real clinching was small to an extreme and it never was prolonged, for as soon as we actually became locked in our close range work, the referee broke us.

I'LL concede there was plenty of in-fighting. I intended that there should be—and the plan worked. I felt that by getting in close to Sharkey and ripping him constantly with short lefts and rights to the body and with a few jolts to the head, I could "break him in half" as the saying goes.

Sharkey figured as a better man in long range fighting than I did. If he had been able to fight me that way, the advantage was all his.

If I could make him fight my way, the advantage was mine. He had just as good a chance to trick me into fighting his way as I had of tricking him into fighting my way.

Most of our battling was done in close. That was the way I wanted that fight to be fought. And because I was able to trick the smart Sharkey into fighting my way, I slowed him up with short punches, took the zip out of him with them and finally reduced him to a point where it was possible for me to knock him out.

But it was in-fighting that made it possible for me to do it—not clinching.

Mermaid Swims From Sweden to Denmark

London, Aug. 1 (A.P.).—Miss Edith Jensen, the seventeen-year-old Danish swimmer, who has performed several notable feats recently, has swam across the Sound between Sweden and Denmark, a distance of about twenty five kilometers, says a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Copenhagen.

Miss Jensen is said to have left Barsebaeck, Sweden, at 8:40 o'clock yesterday and to have landed at Klampenburg, north of Copenhagen, at 7:30 last evening.

Miss Jensen in April set what is claimed as a world's record for women for non-stop swimming. She was credited with swimming for twenty-three and a half hours. In June Miss Jensen swam around the island of Heligoland in three hours and forty-seven minutes. The water was cold and she had to fight a strong current.

Hub Model Yacht Leads Competitors

Gosport, England, Aug. 1 (A.P.).—The model yacht Bostonian II., owned by John Black, commodore of the Boston Model Yacht Club, led its closest rival, the British entrant, Gertrude, by two points at the end of this morning's round of the international regatta for model yachts.

The Bostonian outsailed the Gertrude, but was beaten in today's sailing by the German entrant, Berlin, and the French boat, Marianne.

The standing of the yachts in the competition for a silver cup presented by the British magazine, Yachting Monthly, this morning was Bostonian II 64, Gertrude, 62, Berlin, 30, and Marianne, 20.

Tennis men given major letters were: Captain Reggie Bard, Kansas City, Mo.; T. F. O'Connell, Chicago; Edward Clark, Chicago; A. Travis, Tulsa, Okla., and Edward Rodriquez, San Nicolas, Cebu, P. I. T. R. Liggett, Metropolis, Ill., was given a minor letter.

50 ROUNDS OF FIGHTING FOR FOUR BITS

Expecting to uncover a new heavyweight contender in the person of Jack Gagnon of New Bedford, the Argonne Club stages the initial boxing show tomorrow night at Braves Field under the new plan which limits the top price to $2, and indications point to one of the most successful boxing premiers of history.

Gagnon, who already looms up as a mighty dangerous heavyweight among the second flight giants of the ring, especially since his crushing knockout of Ed Keeley, whom Paulino refused to meet here, will clash with Romero Rojas in the 10 round final of a card comprising eight bouts and 50 rounds of boxing.

With two four rounders, four six-rounders, an eight rounder and the final bout of ten rounds, the most critical followers of fistiana are sure to wax enthusiastic.

Danny Sears of East Boston gets his big opportunity for recognition in the semi-final when he meets Bob Lowrie of Scotland, a trial horse who is sure to give the Noddle Island kid the necessary acid test.

Tommy Robson, ring hero of other days, but carrying the same old wallop, will clash with Ted Coolidge in a six rounder.

In fact the entire preliminary card will introduce boxers who are popular in various sections of Greater Boston and whose future is regarded brightly.

The complete card of bouts follow:

4 Rounds—Jimmy Picardi, East Boston, vs. Gene Blanco, North End.
4 Rounds—Johnny Ross, North End, vs. Minty Rose, Ireland.
6 Rounds—Tommy Lannon, Revere, vs. Jimmy McGonagal, Weymouth.
6 Rounds—Tommy Robson, Malden, vs. Ted Coolidge, Newport, N. H.
6 Rounds—Al Lewis, South End, vs. Dick Lambert, Portland, Me.
6 Rounds—Pete Chico, Charlestown, vs. Connie Holmes, South End.
8 Rounds—Danny Sears, East Boston, vs. Bob Lowrie, Scotland.
10 Rounds—Jack Gagnon, New Bedford, vs. Quintin Romero Rojas, Chile.

The card should prove magnetic especially in view of the fact that the prices will give the 50-cent fans a chance to witness the action.

Tickets for the bout may be procured at the office of the Argonne Club, 51 Court street.

SIX RIDERS IN 40-MILE RACE AT OVAL WEDNESDAY

Franco Georgetti, Francesco Zucchetti and Vincent Madonna all of Italy and Bobby Grassin of France are upholding the European end. Uncle Sam will have his laurels upheld by the sturdy and capable legs of George Chapman and Charles Jaeger.

These six pedal pumpers may be split into another group irrespective of nationalities. Jaeger, Chapman, Georgetti and Grassin may be listed as favorites for the title, with Madonna and Zucchetti ranked as dark horses in the 40-mile race at Revere Wednesday night.

The New England professional sprint title will also be contested for Wednesday.

PURES FLOCK TO DILBOY SHOW

The simon pure boxing fans of Boston and surrounding cities are showing keen interest in the Dilboy Post open-air amateur boxing tournament scheduled for Thursday evening at Dilboy Field, Somerville. There will be competition in the following six classes, 112, 118, 126, 135, 147 pounds and heavyweights.

WALTER TRAVIS DIES SUDDENLY IN DENVER

Denver, Col., Aug. 1.—Walter J. Travis, former national amateur golf champion of the United States and Great Britain, died suddenly in a Denver hotel.

Travis had been here for several months, seeking to regain his health.

Travis' wife and daughter, Mrs. George N. Emery, were with him at the time of his death, which came peacefully in his sleep.

The famous amateur golfer, who won his first American championship in 1900, and the British amateur title in 1904, had been advised by his physicians to come to Colorado three years ago. His death, although sudden, was not unexpected by those with him.

Travis' body will be taken to his Long Island home for burial this week.

Freddy Welsh Fought for Small Purses

By Jack Conway

"'THIS is a hard-boiled age. When you're up you're up, but when you're down you're down. Freddy knew all of them when he was on the top, but none of them knew him when he was down and out.'

"I am quoting from an interview given by Mrs. Brahna Weistein Welsh, widow of the former lightweight champion of the world. At 41 the world turned thumbs down on Welsh and he died of a broken heart in a New York hotel.

"Welsh was broken in spirit and penniless just 13 years from the time he wrested the world's lightweight crown from Willie Ritchie of San Francisco after 20 rounds of furious fighting in a London ring.

"I notice that the sport writers say that Welsh made a fortune boxing but that he lost it by poor investments. His health farm at Summit, N. J., is cited as an incident of where he dropped a bundle of dough.

"I knew Freddy Welsh intimately over a span of years and can say from personal knowledge that he never made a great deal of money in the ring. Welsh had the misfortune to come along in the days before there were big purses.

Mr. Boston

"I doubt very much if Welsh got $5,000 for his services when he won the title from Ritchie on July 7, 1914. Half of this amount was eaten up by expenses and his manager's cut.

"From 1914 to 1917 Welsh campaigned around the country tackling the best available opponents. But in those days even a champion didn't pull down a great deal of money. When Welsh fought Matty Baldwin and Freddy Yelle in this city he came here for guarantees of $1,350. This was considered big money at the time.

"WELSH lost his championship to Benny Leonard at the Manhattan A. C., on May 28, 1917. I doubt very much if Welsh got more than $8,000 for this effort. The Manhattan Club is still in operation. It is a small club with a 5,000 seating capacity.

"At the time of the Welsh-Leonard bout, no decisions were permitted in New York. Welsh probably figured Leonard couldn't knock him out in ten rounds and that he would pick up some easy money. The Welshman didn't train very faithfully for the contest and was an easy mark for Leonard's blows. Referee Kid McPartland stopped the contest in the ninth round with Welsh helpless on the ropes.

"That practically ended Welsh's ring career. In 1921 he staged a come back, but, as is usually the case, it was a dismal flop.

"WELSH, whose real name was Fred Hall Thomas, was born in Wales, but he later became an American citizen. It was natural that this brave soul should join the colors during the war.

"In the last days of his life, Welsh was bitter against Jack Dempsey. Although he risked his own financial future to go to war, Welsh defended Dempsey when the latter was charged with being a slacker. When Dempsey came to New York for the Sharkey bout, Welsh asked him to drop around to see him or at least send him a letter. But he never heard from the former champion.

"I don't think Dempsey would have turned Welsh down cold if the former lightweight champion's condition had been called to his attention. Prominent boxers like Dempsey receive hundreds of letters each day. These missives are usually opened and read by secretaries or hangers on at training camps. Most of these letters are never called to the attention of the boxer. Such may have been the fate of the letter which Welsh wrote to Dempsey.

"WELSH was a real ring master. Like Young Griffo, Abe Attell, Joe Gans and Jem Driscoll, he was master of the fine points of the fistic arts. He usually fought from a crouching position, left foot extended, his chin buried on his chest. It was a mighty difficult task to get a clean poke at this elusive target.

"Welsh could punch with either hand, while he was very clever. They say the Welshman almost fell down from laughing when Charley White tried to nail him with a left hook on the chin in their championship match at Denver.

"THE big money didn't arrive in the lightweight class until the days of Benny Leonard. Leonard and Lew Tendler boxed before a $450,000 gate at Jersey City and came back to pick up half a million iron men at New York the following year. A 30 per cent cut of that kind of money amounted to something. Like a great many other great boxers, Welsh had the misfortune to be battling at a time when there was not much money even for the kings of swat."

QUITE A SPLASH WAS MADE

When Martha Norelius of the Women's Swimming Association of New York won two titles and broke five records in the women's national swimming championships held recently at Massapequa, L. I., Miss Norelius won the 100-metres and one-mile events. She broke the record for the 100. In covering the one-mile race she broke the half-mile and 1,000-metre records in addition to the mile. Miss Norelius also won the 100-metre free-style race in record time. Some fish!

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

To Fred J. Wright, Jr., of the Albemarle Golf Club, belongs the honor of being the first golfer to hold two New England titles. A couple of weeks ago Fred Wright was invited to lend a hand to the Scarboro Golf Club in the New England Public Links championships at Franklin Park. He came away with Sam Smart's title. Last week at Worcester he picked up the New England amateur championship.

[illegible] the best punch [illegible] golf today.

There is a fine [illegible] this week end at Rockport. The Rockport Country Club is staging its annual 18-hole handicap medal play tournament. Rockport is a wonderful nine hole course and annually its open attracts golfers from all over the State. Rockport has beautiful greens and [illegible] the very best [illegible] in the 70s.

Johnnie Martin, the former Harvard hockey player, will be up in Woodstock, Vt., next week defending his Vermont Amateur title. Jennie led the field last year at the Barre Country Club and he hopes to repeat this year. The Woodstock course is peculiar in that, although there are only nine fairways, it is an 18-hole course. Woodstock used the double greens, which are in vogue in some parts of England. This will be the 25th annual Vermont State championship and will start on August 10 and conclude on the 13th.

Billy Whitcomb, who was a finalist in both the State and New England amateur championships, will in all probability play with Jack Winslow, his clubmate from Worcester, in the Jaques Cup competition this week. Winslow reached the finals in the Jaques Cup last season while teamed with Warren Hopkins, but "Hoppy" doubts if he will play this year, due to sickness in his family.

JOHNSON ENDS 20 YEARS AS TWIRLER

Washington, Aug. 1 (A.P.).—When the sun sets this evening Walter Johnson will have rounded out a fifth of a century as a major league pitcher—and he has served only one club, the Washington Senators.

Twenty years ago tomorrow the [illegible] as the fans [illegible] for his first start in the big show. He pitched seven innings against Detroit, was relieved [illegible] by Long Tom Hughes with the score 2 to 1 against him after he had given the Tigers six [illegible]. Detroit subsequently won 3 to 2.

Tomorrow Johnson will face the Tigers again [illegible] of twenty years ago. It will be "Johnson Day."

MISS NORELIUS WINS ANOTHER

Massapequa, L. I., Aug. 1.—Girls of the Women's Swimming Association of New York won three more National A. A. U. senior aquatic championships over the 55-yard course of the B[illegible]more Shores [illegible] Club here and thereby achieved the greatest triumph in the annals of [illegible] outdoor title tests. Not only [illegible] they win every event on the card but they shattered records in all the swimming fixtures.

The winners were Martha Norelius, who gained her fifth victory [illegible] by capturing the 880-yard free style swim; Miss Helen Meany, who added the [illegible] fancy diving crown to the [illegible] she earned Wednesday, and Miss Agnes Geraghty, who [illegible] in the 220-yard breast stroke feature.

The breaststroke test also brought six contenders. Miss Eleanor Holm of the W. S. A., Miss Katherine Mearns of the Boston S. A., Miss Anna [illegible] of the Carnegie L. A. C. of Homestead, Miss Madeline Smith of the Buffalo W. A. C. and Miss Ruth Eberfeld of the Birmingham A. C. completed the field.

Inside Golf

By Chester Horton

Five general methods of starting the back swing or initiating the entire swing action, are used by different leading players. These are 1—Starting with the hands leading. 2—The Push Back. 3—The Drag Back. 4—The Pull. 5—The Hip Twist. Of all these I urge either the start with the hands, No. 1, or with the Hip Twist, No. 5. I maintain that the action as a whole should begin with the hands and at all times be controlled by the hands, but many players find themselves able to take off that way, perhaps because of long practice with some other method. If so they can as well start with the hip twist. Golfers should adopt one of these methods and stick to it.

"Jack Dempsey Looked Like Mercury Against Sharkey," Says Tunney

(Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

SOME persons who viewed the Dempsey-Sharkey fight came away with the idea in their minds:

"Dempsey's legs have gone back on him."

I wish I could [illegible] that way. I wish I [illegible] fixed in my mind [illegible] of a time no longer was Dempsey [illegible] our coming [illegible]

But as I saw [illegible]

[illegible]

BUT what happened in that fight?

Well, Dempsey never was outstepped by Sharkey [illegible]

SHARKEY never [illegible]. Dempsey [illegible]. But Dempsey was constantly [illegible] No matter how [illegible] Sharkey tried to step around, he never was able to keep out of Dempsey's way. Dempsey was on him ALL THE TIME.

Dempsey to Start Training for Bout With Tunney

Los Angeles, Aug. 1.—Jack Dempsey plans to begin training tomorrow for his coming bout with Gene Tunney for the world's heavyweight championship.

Dempsey intends to shadow box and workout in a local gymnasium every other day, sandwiching golf in between, in addition to daily roadwork. He plans to keep his schedule until he starts east about five weeks before the fight.

Dempsey today declared he is feeling great, and although he doesn't yet know where he is going to fight, he says any city will be acceptable to him.

Jack Kearns, Dempsey's estranged former manager, is in Los Angeles on a visit. There is a rumor in circulation that the legal warfare between Kearns and Dempsey, growing out of contract matters, is in a fair way to be settled by their attorneys in New York.

Summer Breezes Will Enhance One's Beauty

By Maria Jeritza,

Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company and One of the Most Beautiful Women of the Day.

ONE of the loveliest things in the world is wind. Whether it tosses the sea into joyous white-caps, billows over fields of wheat and clover, or—still more exquisite—sways over a field of flax in blue bloom; whether it drives clouds across a Summer sky, whirls Autumn leaves into way-side eddies or brings down fragrant showers of Spring blossom petals—whistling, sighing, murmuring, whispering, the wind is beautiful.

If you will let it, [illegible] bring you loveliness.

"I adore the wind" a world famous actress and beauty said to me. I had met her, battling her way along a wind-swept boulevard on the edge of a cliff. A high wind in frolicsome mood was [illegible] and [illegible] away. But [illegible] a winged [illegible] and [illegible] like graceful Grecian [illegible], as she laughingly fought [illegible] a friendly [illegible].

[illegible] watched her [illegible] walk [illegible].

When you walk [illegible] wind, you breathe in much more oxygen than you are [illegible] still day. Moreover [illegible] the exercise when every step is a tussle with the tonic wind.

I admit wind charged with dust or sand, sultry winds are not especially stimulating. Perhaps it is wise to stay out of them as much as possible, and to [illegible] when well protected [illegible].

But the average [illegible] is [illegible] particularly [illegible], and it is usually cool and refreshing. On your return [illegible] "peppy," from a [illegible] looking in your [illegible] note that [illegible] you have [illegible] fresh color and your eyes sparkle you have also acquired a network of fine lines which are etched in your face and even your lips. This parched effect is due to the drying effect of the wind. Do not let it discourage you.

[illegible] for the cold cream will only attract and hold particles of dust and grime.

If your lips are chapped, rub a [illegible] into them. Excellent lip pomade can be bought in stick form. Or you can easily make up the following formula:

Oil of sweet almonds, 40 grams; white wax, 10 grams; spermaceti, 10 grams; oil of bergamot, 1 gram; oil of geranium, 1 gram.

Present Is All of Life

By LUCY LOWELL.

TOO many of us waste our lives and ruin our natural heritage of happiness by ignoring that mighty thing, the present.

We try to pick up existence—a day to-day [illegible] after a—and swing it over to the future.

"Next year I am going to do this and that, so I don't mind the way things are now."

And we start right in living for next year; for the golden thing way up somewhere. And all of the rich brightness that is everywhere about at all times escapes us; we pass it over without so much as a glance for the shadow of a hope that may never come true.

For the future never comes. It is always today; when tomorrow reaches us, that, too, is today. We never catch up with time.

"Boast not thyself of tomorrow," counsels an ancient book, "for who knoweth what a day may bring forth?"

And Omar, the poet, sang:

"Tomorrow! Why, tomorrow
I may be Myself with yesterday's seven thousand years."

Nor is there more to be gained by [illegible] the past. "That was my happy time; if only I could go back and enjoy it again." It is when one moves through life with [illegible] that he misses all [illegible] of today.

Besides what we wish to retain of our yesterdays is included in our todays.

"And all the good the past hath had Remain to make our own time glad."

Thus wrote Emerson. We do not lose and throw away unless we wish to lose.

And there will be nothing we wish to [illegible], ever, if we take care to give our best to the wonderful present.

The Art of Making Friends

By Beatrice Fairfax

"HOW can I get better acquainted?"

Betty, in a letter she begs me not to print, because it "isn't very sensible," states this sensible and practical problem of friendship.

She met a "nice young man," about three years older than herself, a while ago. Betty is seventeen.

The two were introduced at a [illegible] consented because [illegible] was a young man [illegible]

Then the acquaintance ended. Betty has met him since on the street, but the two merely smiled and nodded.

Naturally we all wish to make as many good friends as we [illegible] [illegible] interest and [illegible] a sensible effort, directly or indirectly, to attract and interest a young man who seemed to her on first acquaintance worth while as a friend.

How, then, can Betty go about to attract and interest this young man—let us call him Bob—without overstepping the bounds of dignity and good sense, without forfeiting his respect or her own.

"I know where I could see him," said Betty in her letter, "if I went to a certain place on a certain day. [illegible]"

Wait until you are well acquainted with each other and have learned whether you are congenial and suitable, before you even think the word "love." A girl who is too impressionable, too ready to sentimentalize over a man, often scares him away by her attitude, which shows in her expression and manner, even if she does not express it in words. A man may not wish to get drawn into a serious affair, so he may fear to go further with what might otherwise have proved a delightful friendship, perhaps deepening gradually to love.

Therefore [illegible] to get better acquainted with Bob keep the [illegible] friendship and [illegible]

On the other hand, sincere friend [illegible] Why not let you invite him to call on you when he escorted you home? The chances are he waited for some such invitation from you. You might have [illegible] you would like to have him meet your parents.

Bad Eating Habits in Children

Former President of the American Medical Association

IF your child has developed bad habits of eating; won't give up milk, won't eat this and that; picks and chooses, always choosing the wrong thing [illegible] food, the fault is probably yours. If you would cure the child's [illegible] you must first give a little attention to yourself.

The chief faults of parents in the upbringing of their children are responsible for this kind of finickiness which the doctors call anorexia. One is unduly prolonged bottle feeding; another is unduly prolonged milk feeding, and the third is the use of toys, unkept promises, treats and other means as artificial pacifiers.

The habits of infancy should be [illegible] to infancy. When they are extended into childhood [illegible] it very likely that the habits [illegible] will be extended into adult life, an event which, roughly speaking, is the cause of every [illegible] suffered by humanity, at any rate, every mental ill. A child should be weaned from the bottle to the spoon and cup at one year or earlier and the process should be complete at fifteen months.

Milk is the food of infancy and to carry it on into later childhood [illegible] only substantial physical [illegible] can be found in nearly [illegible] cases of anorexia. When teeth begin to erupt, solids should begin to appear in the diet. Not only does this accustom the infant to the formation of proper habits, but, what is more important, it provides it with constituents necessary to growth and development which are either not present in milk at all or are not present in sufficient quantity. One of the chief of these is iron. Careful inquiry will show that most of these children with poor appetites drink a quart or more of milk a day. The adult who drank as much as this and performed no heavy physical work [illegible] have appetite for very little else. A sensible combination of [illegible] other foods contains all the elements necessary for life and growth that can be found in milk but in more abundance and in a more acceptable form; more digestible [illegible] and more stimulating to appetite and bowel function. Milk is a solid more difficult to digest than a tender steak, and the other solids are not only better digested by the young child but give it more benefit [illegible] no reason [illegible] the habit of eating them [illegible]

A GENIUS which manifested itself at the age of three years [illegible] through [illegible] years of [illegible] and unmarked grave, was the fate of him who remained for but a moment—Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart.

In his twenty-sixth year, after a career whose variety was [illegible] exceeded by his extreme poverty, Mozart married Constance von Weber, the daughter of a composer. The story is told that a friend calling on them one day, found the young couple waltzing in order to keep warm.

It was a hard struggle keeping the ever-howling wolf from the door and having no permanent appointment, Mozart worked to the limit.

Mozart's genius was recognized too late, for when on his death bed he received offers of positions [illegible] of which would have [illegible] beyond want.

On December 5, 1791, Mozart died in Vienna, of [illegible] The day of his funeral a [illegible] storm was raging and [illegible] at the cemetery gate. Mozart's grave is unknown [illegible] when his sorrowing widow was [illegible] to go to the cemetery, she was unable to find his last resting [illegible]

The beauty of Mozart's music has been the inspiration of countless [illegible] and is a monument which surpasses in [illegible] and reverence any carven image of granite which could be erected.

Theories on Mound Builders

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

THE recent opinions of the anthropologist, that the mysterious mounds left by the Indians, or their predecessors, scattered over the Mississippi Valley were intended as towers of refuge for the people and their belongings during great inundations of the river, seems a plausible solution of a long-standing enigma of early American history.

It recalls the legend of the Tower of Babel said to have been erected in the populous valley of the Euphrates and Tigris after the Flood of Noah. Towers of refuge of all kinds were among the first human inventions. Where no hills were close at hand, and inundations came suddenly and with overwhelming force, artificial elevations alone could afford safety.

The same structures were, of course, useful in case of invasion by human enemies, both for watch towers and for places of defense. No doubt the Indian mounds which exist still, after many centuries of destructive action by floods and weather, were sometimes used in battles—may even have been constructed with just that use in view as well as for refuge from the river floods.

The Indians in these rich lands were perforce primitive agriculturists as well as hunters. In great floods, like that of the present year, all of their stores would be swept away, and they would be left to starve unless they had safe depots at elevations that the water could not attain. To construct these must have been, as Dr. Kidder says, a gigantic task at which they toiled for years.

As far as we know they had practically no machinery to work with. They carried the tons and tons of earth and gravel needed to make a single mound in baskets on their heads, and, considering their lack of mechanical resources, the work that they accomplished seems astonishing.

The mounds are roughly pyramidal in form, and flat on top, and some of them could have furnished refuge for as many as five hundred persons. They average 150 feet on a side and are about 50 feet high. Post holes on the flat summits indicate that buildings were erected there out of logs and twigs, plastered with clay.

While the motive for the construction of these mounds seems undoubtedly to have been furnished by recurrent inundations of the great river, yet Dr. Kidder thinks that they also served, to a certain extent, as temples or altars, and perhaps a dwelling place for chiefs.

The Indian population was not dense, and a single mound might have sufficed to hold an entire tribe in an emergency, gathered around their chief, and looking out, with Indian stolidity, over the vast waste of waters that the Great Spirit had sent to drive his children from their hunting and fishing grounds and their little cultivated plots.

Drawing the Line at just where the shoulder ends and the sleeve begins is quite a problem for stylists. Especially varied are shoulder lines this season, most of the French designers advocating long shoulders continuing a third of the way to the elbows.

Lucky in Love and unlucky at cards are two conditions that are supposed to go together. Curled Hands

Story of Love and Intrigue; A Girl Who Kept Her Head and a Tiger Woman

CHAPTER XLI.

WITH impassive countenance, Parton was taking his orders from his master—orders to pack, to be ready to accompany him to Southampton where Carler's yacht lay, to put out suitable apparel for the morrow. To each instruction Parton murmured a dutiful "Very good, Sir Frank," and not even the startling announcement of the Henrietta street arrangement disturbed his air of imperturbable detachment.

Parton knew his place. He was not a self styled "confidential valet" for nothing. In Parton's experience "them that said least was told most;" and this most certainly applied to an employer like Sir Frank, who sometimes talked rather freely with his personal male servant, because he had no confidant in his own sphere. Men of the class he moved in avoided intimacy with him instinctively and for choice, because had they been minded to describe him they would put him down as a "rank outsider" and "a bit of a bounder"—the usual type of nouveau riche of one generation and not quite refined.

He [illegible] and seemed an [illegible] together.

Parton certainly had a good manner, and he never presumed. He could be relied on in matters sartorial. As a valet, Carler considered he was worth his weight in gold, as perhaps he was to an employer whose choice in [illegible] did not always correspond with his taste [illegible] socks.

"We shall cruise in the Mediterranean for a month," Carler concluded. "I shall be taking you with me, Parton."

"Very good, Sir Frank. Sailing when, Sir Frank?"

"On Saturday, I think. We [illegible] put up at the South W[illegible]

[illegible] very long, but I have every reason to [illegible] I live to see a w[illegible]

Parton [illegible] It now looked as though he were holding himself deliberately refraining from speech.

"A charming girl," Carler said. "Very beautiful—don't you think, Parton?"

Astonished, He Turned and Faced the Quiet Servant

Parton cleared his throat.

"I've nothin' to say against her looks, Sir Frank," he replied. "Very high class. She'd take a first prize anywhere for looks alone. All the same, if you'll pardon my taking the liberty and speakin' out as man to man, Sir Frank, you 'ave surprised me and no mistake, because I shouldn't 'ave thought it necessary under the circumstances—that is to say, makin' it a tie-up for life."

Carler's jaw dropped. Astonished, he turned and faced the quiet servant who had so suddenly presumed.

"What in heaven's name do you mean?" he said. "Have you forgotten yourself?"

"No, Sir Frank. Though perhaps I shouldn't 'ave spoken so plain, rememberin' that least said is soonest mended. Only you've been a kind employer to me, Sir Frank, short though the time is I've served you, and the warnin' words slipped out; for I shouldn't like to see you took in, Sir Frank, what one [illegible]—" He broke off. "I'm a careful man, sir, and it isn't my 'abit to make statements what can't be backed up to. If, as you say, you ain't known the young woman"—(Parton was so sure of himself now that he did not even trouble to describe Jill as "a young lady")—"for long, it's quite likely that I, who 'ave seen 'er before in peculiar circumstances, could tell you more about her than you know yourself."

He paused, not for breath, but to observe the exact effect of his words.

Carler's face grew flushed and his brown eyes bulged. He was clearly disquieted and upset.

"It's your duty now at any rate to explain what you mean," he said. "You have rather—upset me."

"I'm rather upset myself, Sir Frank—mainly on your account, sir, 'aving become so partial to you, for a better gentleman never stepped, though I say it who 'ave waited on nobility all me life. It would 'urt me cruel to see you throw yourself away, Sir Frank, on a piece that is no better than she should be."

He had gone too far to draw back now. Besides, he would not have retracted a single word he had said, if he could. He knew his man. Carler wouldn't shut him up, dismiss him for his sullying innuendoes or kick him out of the place as most men would have done. Carler wouldn't rest till he'd got it out of him. . . .

"Shall I go on, Sir Frank?" Parton queried sympathetically, his tone that of a physician who has bad news to impart.

Carler licked his dry lips.

"Yes. You'd have to go on now. Tell me all you know—everything."

"Well, Sir Frank, I [illegible] expect it [illegible] I've got information that's worth a lot to you, because it'll save you from makin' a very great mistake, and I can't see my way to partin' with it for nothin'."

"Of course not. If your information is of any value and correct, I shall naturally reward you adequately by raising your wages."

"I [illegible] want a hundred pound cash, Sir Frank. [illegible] what I say—and it's cheap at that, for [illegible]

Carler Stared as Though Hypnotized by the Golden Thread

"A hundred then," agreed Carler. "Don't beat about the bush."

"Well, then, Sir Frank, this is what I 'ave to tell you. Miss Jill Wisden ain't what you take 'er for. She's what you'd call a young woman with a past—not so very far past, neither. You've 'eard me talk of Lord Medreth, Sir Frank? Well, when I was at Beaulieu in 'is service, Miss Wisden was a lady guest of 'is. I can't give you all details, Sir Frank, not bein' for me to supply, but I 'ave evidence to prove that it's not a case of mistaken identity, and 'ere it is."

He produced his pocket book and from it carefully extracted a fold of tissue paper containing his first exhibit. Between finger and thumb he picked up and held out a golden hair, not long but obviously off a woman's shingled head.

"That's what I found on the 'airbrush in 'is bedroom—the mornin' after, as the films 'ave it," he observed, and dropped it into Sir Frank's palm.

Carler stared down at it as though hypnotised by the golden thread. It was the same color, of course—very golden, real gold; but other girls had bright hair just like that . . . It wasn't enough to hang Jill, not by itself . . .

"Come, come," he said, "that's very thin, you know. You can't make such damaging statements on slender evidence like that."

"No, Sir Frank. This is my trump card." With a flourish not unlike a conjuror's, Parton produced the fatal square of cambric. "And this is what I found on the floor, also the mornin' after. You'll see it's marked with the name in f[illegible] just in the corner, Sir Frank. [illegible] I 'ope I've [illegible] I'm afraid. [illegible]"

"Yes, go on—if there's anything else."

Carler sat down heavily in a [illegible]

"I've nearly finished, Sir Frank, but I've somethin' else you might like to 'ear, only it's w[illegible] a [illegible] more. A hundred and fifty would cover the whole lot."

Carler added [illegible] He was beyond [illegible] against Jill, the fury of a cute business man who believes himself cheated had him in its grip. He no longer desired Jill. He detested her . . . And she had wheedled 2,000 pounds out of him, the adventuress. Two thousand pounds, and all but his name as well!

"So far as I know," Parton's cool voice pursued, "this affair ain't over. It's goin' on all the time under the rose, and if you was to 'ave married 'er, it would 'ave been under your nose instead, because she's darin' and 'e don't care—not my Lord Medreth. . . . You know his reputation, Sir Frank. Very dashin' with the ladies; what you'd call a gay Lothario. I was at Boulay's only a few weeks ago, and I was waitin' on the pair, Sir Frank. They 'ad a room to themselves—the usual style o' thing. . . . The luncheon cost 5 pounds—and it wasn't for what they ate. . . . I kept the bill as a souvenir. 'Is lordship left it on the table. So what with one thing and another, I should say you are well out of it, Sir Frank. I [illegible]"

"Not at all," he said. "At least, not in any—er—lasting degree. You've staggered me, naturally; but I might have been much more seriously upset if the wedding had actually [illegible]

The Eyes of Youth

Who Can Resist Their Charm?

DRAWN BY Doroth[illegible]

LIMPID BLUE, transparent hazel, mellow brown—eyes that gaze and are gazed upon. Eyes that sparkle with the brilliance of youthful exuberance and delight all upon whom they alight!

For such is the influence of youth. These same eyes, set in a background of wrinkles and graying hair, would lose their charm and fail to enchant. But what mortal can resist the twinkle from shiny orbs of blackness, when their owner tosses a mass of jet curls in his direction? What man is proof against tears that drop like crystals from eyes of heavenly azure?

Then, when all the love dreams are mirrored in the dazzling depths of the beloved eyes, and one reads the hopes and fears, the trust and wistfulness that lie embedded there could ever the wildest imagination conjure a picture more beautiful?

And so it ever goes! A little of the soda champagne mounted to Sylvia's [illegible] and made her reckless. Inside her breast was something light, as shimmering, as moonlight.

"Wish you were going along?" she asked [illegible]

"Do I [illegible] Sylvia Bryant—you're the [illegible] thing I ever looked at. And you're going out with old puffy Cousin Vance! Damn—a couple of damns! It's Joyce's fault—she maneuvered the whole business. Heaven knows why."

"It's all right, isn't it?" Sylvia asked swiftly. "Should I have declined? I don't know—"

Stuart Gifford came closer to her [illegible] His eyes [illegible]

Her heart began to contract, to expand, with a sweet little ache. He was so upstanding, so clean-cut. . . so magnetic. . . .

"Yes," she said—almost in a whisper.

Vance and Joyce Ackerman came into the room, the spell was broken. Nevertheless [illegible] nerves that made her [illegible] to Vance Ackerman during the smooth ride downtown in his car.

The show was already in the first act when they arrived. At the first act's [illegible] audience began to buzz and there was the inevitable movement of restless, cigarette-craving men and women toward the back of the auditorium.

Fads and Fashions

Fashion's Matchmaking continues as briskly as ever; hence the rage for accessories in sets brings many attractive combinations. Among the smartest sets are the pouch purse, long scarf and narrow belt of novelty English woolen. Imported from London, this set is developed in various pastel tones. The purse is mounted on a leather covered frame, and both purse and belt are lined in moire.

Flying Feat Forms Fad for airplane motifs in jewelry as well as in appliqued leather trimming on purses. In patent leather, of a contrasting color, a small plane is mounted upon a large envelope purse of reptile grained leather. Upon a felt skull cap a hammered silver pin, representing an airship is placed on one side. Brooches of silver, set in rhinestones, also simulate "Lucky Lindy's" ship.

Judged Upon Their Metal, large fringed satin bordered squares are considered far smarter [illegible] embroidered shawls. These [illegible] metal squares are the [illegible] evening wraps of the Summer [illegible] and are available from a yard to a yard and a half in diameter.

Strikingly Sporty are the sleeveless jacket and handbag of [illegible], banded in pigskin and trimmed in appliqued triangles of [illegible] contrasting shades. This set is seen at its best when worn with a cashmere or thin Angora sport frock and small felt hat, banded in the suede.

Merely Cashmere is quite enough to make a sweater ext[illegible] for these little garments in [illegible] weight, finest grade cashmere are the most fashionable items in Summer sports wear. Three-piece sweater costumes of cashmere are being worn at the most exclusive country clubs and Summer resorts.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Dear Aunt Bella—

One day in court, where I was prosecuting a bootlegger, I spoke at some length and got thirsty. Keeping my eyes on the judge, I reached out for a glass of water. You can picture my surprise when I discovered that I had emptied the glass containing the evidence.

BOOK REVIEW
Another Agonizing Episode in the Tear-Provoking Romance of "Maurine," 1901

Roy and I, dear playmates, hand in hand,
Wandered in mem'ry, through olden ways.
It was the second evening of his coming.
Maurine was playing dreamily, and humming
Some wordless melody of white-souled thought,
While Roy and I sat by the open door,
Reliving childish incidents of yore.
Roy, always eloquent, was waxing fine,
When suddenly in pauses of the talk,
I heard a well-known step upon the walk,
And looked up quickly to meet full in mine
The eyes of Vivian Dangerfield! A flash
Shot from their depths—a sudden blaze of light
Like that swift followed by the thunder's crash
Which said, 'Suspicion is confirmed by sight,'
Then o'er his clean-cut face a cold white look Crept, like the pallid moonlight o'er a brook."

To say that Vivian was burned up is putting it lightly. He stepped toward Maurine and her coz—

"Haughtily and said,
'Please pardon my intrusion, Miss Maurine,
I called to ask Miss Trevor for a book
She spoke of lending me, nay, sit you still'
And I by grant of your permission, will Pass by to where I hear her playing.'"

Isn't it a mess? The poor La Pello kid didn't mean nothing by sitting with her coz, but you know how men are when they have a name like Viv Dangerfield. Oh well—mebbe it will come out all right.

DAILY SHORT STORY

A PROMISSORY NOTE
By Merlyn Swift

"GOOD night, Alan, and thank you very much." Hendryk Van Luden's huge hand completely covered the smaller, more delicate hand of his friend. "We shall take that fishing trip next month then—that is agreed?"

Dr. Alan Sayre looked admiringly at Van Luden. "Yes, next month. You're a wonder, Hendryk. One man in a million . . ."

"[illegible]!" Van Luden's thin lips [illegible] in a smile. "Gently, old chap. You don't know so much about me, even if we did go to school together. I won't be any candidate for a halo in the merry hereafter. See you later."

Cordially they separated. Sayre off to visit his patients, Van Luden [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] who [illegible] to [illegible] him.

For an hour he sat there in silence. A spectre-like man-servant came, took away tray and glasses, put fresh coals on the fire. Van Luden did not see him.

The life he looked back upon was not a good one. Not often did he give himself to retrospect; it depressed him. There were men who hated him, women who hated and regretted him. His heavy fingers closed and twined about the cold briar that he had abandoned as tasteless.

Often his eyes rested on a picture standing on a small table at his elbow. At last he reached out and took it, pressed it to his lips and spoke to it with a depth of passion that would have astonished the world that knew Hendryk Van Luden as a man without emotion. "A predatory fish," someone had called him; some other, "a man who destroyed Beauty for the pure joy of destruction."

"Everything I tried for, Marcia, I have won—except you. And you have been the great ambition of my life. Money—that was easy, social position—the money brought me that, women—pah! They were the easiest. But not you, Marcia, not you. You sneered at my offer of marriage. You told me I was incapable of love. And you gave yourself to Parmenter, a man I hated. Yet I have never ceased to want you, and while life remains to me I never shall. You said I could not feel love, and you would never trust yourself alone with me. You were wise. I would take you to me, subdue you, bend you to my will. If it is not love, Marcia, what is it? Dear God, it pains and pains. It craves for you—Marcia! Must I go out of life defeated—defeated by a woman whom I could break in my hands? I have prided myself that I have never known defeat, but you—you lovable, bewitching thing—I will have you if I have to snatch you from his arms!"

"A lady to see you, sir."

With speed amazing in a man of so great girth and stature Van Luden was on his feet. The butler did not see the snapped pipe-stem that his master held in his hand before he consigned the pieces to the flames.

Van Luden stared at the card. His eyes were playing him tricks. But no. She was in the room. Softly the butler closed the door behind her.

"Marcia!"

Her hands were icy in his; the fur wrap he helped remove left shoulders cold as marble and as dazzlingly white. He put her in a chair across the hearth from his. He was at a loss for words. Clumsily he adjusted her picture that in his excitement he had dropped haphazardly upon the tabouret. Seeing what he was about, she smiled a bitter mirthless smile.

"You still look at me, Hendryk?"

In silence he regarded her for a moment while the fire crackled very loud and faint rattlings of a loose window pane were amplified many times. She was a woman to stir men's pulses, to make them forget. She was of that type, [illegible] gold hair, blue eyes sent his blood [illegible].

"I still love you, Marcia," he returned at last. "I do not relinquish a desired prize. And you are the one I have most desired. Yes; for an hour before you came I sat here with your picture . . . You recall how I had to beg for it? . . . and thought of you, of all you meant to me. I do love you, Marcia."

"Love! You err. I know the love of which you speak, the love of possession of having a woman as your own an object of art, a horse or a car. You have always craved for me as a child craves for a plaything. The only thing I give you credit for is that you have been persistent . . And you have won."

She said the last words very low and Van Luden doubted for an instant that he had heard. Then he crossed to her, lifted her easily into his arms and crushed his lips against her mouth. She was limp in his embrace. When he released her she looked at him defiantly.

"God, how I hate you." Her eyes were hard, her lips bloodless.

"Then . . . Did I not hear aright? Are you merely here to torture me? The dividing line between love and hate is uncertain. And sometimes I hate you . . . hate you because you defy me, because you deny the real love of my heart. It is a real love. Why did you come to me?"

"To give myself to you. Do you want me?"

Again he went to take her to him. His arms half lifted, fell to his side.

"Sit down, Marcia. What is the real purpose of this visit?"

"Fifty thousand dollars."

Van Luden stood on the hearth rug, looking down at her. Her hands played uneasily with a heavy bracelet at her wrist.

"For you?"

"For Boyd Parmenter, my husband. It will save him from prison."

"I would give many times that for you, Marcia," said Van Luden deliberately. He went to his chair and settled deep in it. "You shall have a cheque shortly. And in return for this I get . . ."

"Whatever you want."

Van Luden's knuckles pressed through his flesh. Only with a grimly terrible effort he stayed in his chair. So easily, so coolly she offered herself to him. Vividly he saw the beauty of her, the gleam of silken limbs, the white of shoulders, the piquancy of her face.

"Well?," Marcia could not bear the protracted stillness.

"Does Boyd know . . . that you have come here?"

She lowered her head and stilled the nervous play of her fingers.

"No . . . Oh, no!"

But Van Luden saw the lie. "He is willing to sacrifice you to save his precious hide. Oh, Marcia!"

Van Luden's lips were a thin line, a tiny pulse fluttered visibly at his straining temple. He went to his desk, wrote out a cheque and returning handed it to her.

"There. That is what you ask. And now . . . ?"

She did not look at him, so she did not see the twinkle in his grey eyes, the rare gentleness of his face. He handed her a fountain pen and pad.

"Write what I dictate," he commanded her.

Ten minutes later Hendryk Van Luden sat alone before the hearth-fire in his study. In his great hand was a slip of paper on which was written:

One year after date for value received I promise to return forever to Hendryk Van Luden
MARCIA PARMENTER

Gently he kissed it, made a move to throw it into the fire, changed his mind and reached for the telephone.

"Dr. Sayre. . . . Oh, Alan. You are absolutely sure that my heart won't last over six months. No shadow of doubt, eh? Thanks. I rather hoped. . . . Well now, be time to go fishing. Good night."

Then he gave Marcia's promise to the flames.

RADIO DIALOG

by C. WILLIAM RADOS

OLIVER ASPIRIN has taken over the job of writing DX Reports. His first report is as follows: The management is not to blame but tell your friends if satisfied, otherwise tell us.

Last night was somewhat cloudy with north to south and north westerly winds changing to light south east so as to suit everyone. Static was not very heavy, in fact we could not lift it at all, so those folks who report static is heavy should know it is not like a crate of oranges and cannot be lifted.

* * *

Metereological stratafication indicates hyperbolical clavicellular drift of fading beginning with Pittsburgh and Philadelphia and ending with South End. Round trip tickets ten per cent. off.

* * *

Stations picked up were Harvard to Andrew Square and Park Street Under although the announcers at Fields Corner were indistinct. Squeals and moans came from the Haymarket Relief Station. There was no fading due to our using MacFlintee's all gas, 100 per cent. wool radio. The dark oak cabinet was guaranteed not to fade.

"Good evening, nobody. You are listening to Jim Nellenson, sent to you each rainy evening by the makers of hot dog overcoats, whose slogan is, 'You might as well catch cold as wear any other coat.'

"I am going to no sing the number of stations I picked upon my electrical refrigerator due to courtesy of the Ice Trust. I had to leave home at 9:00 because I wanted to pick up something besides radio stations. So only a short list of thirty-five stations will be presented.

* * *

"All these places were caught on the Wash-a-Shirt laundry machine. As it was a poor night, I could not hear more than three San Francisco radios, although the man in the next apartment had a Scotch record on and for a moment I thought I had caught Scotland. However, I soon knew what I had heard when the Scotchman's wife caught him using a new needle."

THE WITTY SAYINGS OF MEDBURY

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

MODERN girls are so averse to cooking that the average bride-to-be even leaves the kitchen out of her air castle.

ROMANCE is Paradise and there aren't any sinks in Heaven.

FOOD is the way to a man's heart, but most girls try to reach it via the delicatessen.

IT'S a poor butler's pantry that hasn't any detours.

MARRIAGE is all right, but it takes too many girls out of the parlor.

WHEN laundry comes in the kitchen door, love flies down the dumb-waiter.

THE twentieth century bride promises to love, honor and keep out of the basement.

THOUSANDS of wives are accomplished musicians, but they don't like to render their solos on a wash board.

THEY play by ear and not by knuckle.

ONE girl says the way her husband started her in working, you'd have thought he married her in an employment agency.

HE finally committed bigamy. He wanted one wife for washing and the other for ironing.

CUPID has solved many a man's laundry problem.

THE average bride usually starts in at the kitchen and works her way down to the cellar.

ONE woman says her husband was wonderful to her, he treated her just like a cook.

THEY got along fine until he forgot himself and remembered that she was his wife.

SHE had to divorce him eventually in order to get Sunday afternoon off.

CUPID is the world's greatest musician. With one little arrow, he can take a girl out of a beautiful evening gown and put her into a rubber apron.

RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

THE air is sultry now with noonday heat, the shadows have grown shorter, hour by hour, until the sun has entered each retreat of woodland and his shafts pierce every bower. There lies a hush upon the country-side, a breathless stillness, nature's self at rest, as though a pause had come in being's tide, a magic pause that held its waves at crest. And so with men, they halt at life's high noon, reviewing where they passed up youth's bright way, and then peer onward to that road where soon their feet shall follow till the close of day. Thus for one brilliant interval they stand, erect upon life's sun-swept, splendid heights, and in high noon of power they command life's hidden things, its gifts and its delights.

SMART SAYINGS OF CLEVER CHILDREN

The Boston Evening American will pay $1 for published smart sayings. Address "Smart Sayings," Boston Evening American.

Little Freddie was preparing to go out calling with his mother. Suddenly he called her in a rather startled voice:

"Mama, is this bay rum in the brown bottle?"

"Oh," said Freddie, "maybe that's why I can't get my hat off."

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS---

By HELEN ROWLAND

THIS, my Daughter, is the prayer of Everywife, which she chanteth in her secret heart.

Oh Lord, deliver me from becoming a confirmed nagger!

From repeating the SAME admonition unto seven times seven times.

From saying, "I TOLD you so!"

From keeping tabs on him and from "picking on him" for little things. For, unto a man, a "picking" wife is as a mosquito which buzzeth continuously, and stingeth always in an unexpected place.

Stay me from electing myself the censor of his smokes, his drinks, his collars, his diet and his amusements, lest he come to regard me as a detective, a chaperone and an alarm clock.

Deliver me from the temptation to cling around his neck, until I choke the love out of him.

From eyeing every personable damsel with suspicion, and suspecting him of a secret tenderness for every woman at whom he glanceth.

From saying "I see through you!" instead of "Darling, I UNDERSTAND you!"

From revealing to him ALL my thoughts and telling him all my sufferings, reactions, and secret opinions. For a book and a life that have been read through are put upon the shelf—and forgotten.

Deliver me from "moods" and complainings; from petty arguments and emotional outbursts. For a woman that delugeth a man with emotions is as an April day, which keepeth him forever in doubt and torment and prepared for the storm and the torrent.

Stay me from confessions of my past loves and flirtations. Let me not throw up to him the triumphs and romances of my girlhood, nor boast to him of "the men I might have married." For these things are as drops of aloes in the heart of a sensitive man; but an egotist laugheth secretly thereat.

Deliver me from the temptation to remind him of his weaknesses, and from the "Now, John!" habit. For I would not fill him with an inferiority complex, but with courage and hope and self-confidence.

Let me be his soothing syrup and a cushion for his head, in times of trouble and defeat; and his stimulant, his booster and his cheerleader in times of action and triumph.

Close mine eyes to all his faults and failings, and open them to all his virtues and achievements.

For an husband is only an husband; but a good wife is a mother, a friend, a rescuer, a guardian, a valet, a refuge and a backbone to the man who patteth her on the head and calleth her "Baby!"

GUINN NAMED IN TRADE POST AT HAGUE

By FRANK H. MELOON.
Financial Editor

Appointment of Paul S. Guinn of Shamokin, Pa., associated for the past two years with Harvey A. Sweetser, New England District Manager of the U. S. Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in Boston as assistant, to act as assistant trade commissioner at The Hague, was announced today by Acting Director O. P. Hopkins of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Paul S. Guinn

Assistant Trade Commissioner Guinn has had long and varied service at foreign posts of the department, including Johannesburg and London. He is no stranger to The Hague, having been stationed there before coming to Boston. In 1924 he was transferred to Boston as commercial agent, the following year being promoted to assistant district manager.

In announcing the appointment of Mr. Guinn, Acting Director Hopkins pointed out that the Netherlands is not only an important direct importer of various American agricultural and manufactured products but is also a large transshipper of foreign and colonial merchandise. It is highly desirable he stated, that the interests of American exporters be safeguarded in this important commercial region.

Business men feel cheered when shown that the political regime is running the country well. The stock markets reflect such cheer. Note that Brig.-Gen. Herbert M. Lord, director of the Bureau of the Budget, speaking in Rockland Me., said that a surplus of $338,000,000 is expected this year and that the country finds itself in a quandary as to its disposition. "The World War debt," he said, reached its most portentious proportions August 31, 1919, when it was $26,598,-848. In less than eight years it has been forced down to $18,-611,906,931.

Members of the New York Stock Exchange have received the following memorandum from the Exchange: "Members are requested to inform their customers and correspondents of the rule that all orders, including stop orders, should specify the time during which they are to be in effect, and unless otherwise specifically designated shall be considered good for the day only."

No evident reason for the above notification exists, but of course there may be a reason. I have found stock exchange firms and their correspondents scrupulously careful to obey the rule.

Secretary George A. Rich of the Boston Stock Exchange tells me a decided interest has developed in seats of the exchange. This follows publication of comment in this column to the effect that seats have been selling too low. The price is now around $9,500, still a fraction of the worth of what they represent. There is more "young blood" in the Boston Stock Exchange today than ever before, one old time member, who is glad to welcome new energy, tells me.

I heard at least a dozen Boston Stock Exchange members talking about the "gold" discovery in Greene-Cananea's properties, but have so far failed to see any of the company's "write-ups" which exploit it.

BILL FOR $2 IN $1,000,000 TAX SUIT HELD UP

Expenses of $2 in connection with the settlement of a tax suit for $1,-000,000 in favor of the U. S. government were held up today by Comptroller General J. R. McCarl, budget economist at Washington.

The suit was brought by the collector of internal revenue at Boston against the executors of the estate of Frederick Ayer, who died at Pride's Crossing in 1919, leaving several millions in property and personal assets.

A tax of $661,871 was paid by the executors, which the collector alleged was a false return, proceeding against them for $3,183,600, his estimate of the amount due.

A few days ago the suit was dismissed and papers pertinent to that disposition were hurriedly requested by U. S. courts in California.

The office of the U. S. attorney here complied with the "hurry-up" demand by dispatching the required documents by air mail.

The expense bill for that type of mailing came to $2 and word was received from the auditor's office of the Department of Justice that the refund of the expenses has been held up pending investigation.

MISS FOSS TAKES OVER NEW STATE WELFARE JOB

Commissioner Conant today authorized the transfer of Miss Lillian F. Foss from the Mothers' Aid Division of the State Department of Public Welfare to the position of Supervisor of Case Work in Mothers' Aid families for the city of Boston.

Miss Foss resides in Jamaica Plain. She was employed for 3½ years in juvenile court under Judge Baker and has been with the State Department for fourteen years. In 1926 she was one of the five volunteer workers sent by the Red Cross to aid in Florida Relief Work.

CURTIS AGAINST EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS

Washington, Aug. 1 (A.P.)—Senator Curtis, Republican leader, came out today against a special session of Congress. He said there was no occasion for the President to call Congress before its regular session in December. The Senate Commerce Committee should join the House Rivers and Harbors and Flood Control committees next Fall as soon as the reports of army engineers are ready, he said, to devise flood control.

The House Ways and Means Committee, he assumed, would also have prepared by that time tax reduction legislation. Senator Curtis has just returned from a visit to his daughters in Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

PAN-AMERICANISM FAILS AS 'BOND OF FELLOWSHIP'

Williamstown, Aug. 1 (A.P.).—Pan-Americanism has failed to establish a genuine bond of fellowship between the United States and Latin America because of the absence of equality and understanding, Prof. William R. Shepherd of Columbia University told members of the Institute of Politics today.

"As an agency of political co-operation, Pan-Americanism has proved incapable of realization," he declared, as the Latin American nations are "so fearful lest joint action with the colossus of the north might establish a precedent for intervention, whereby the Colossus would do all of the intervening."

BELIEVE BOMB WAS MEANT FOR MAN IN MELLETT CASE

Canton, O., Aug. 1 (A.P.)—Belief a bomb exploded under the home of William G. Maxwell, coal company head, Sunday, was intended for Hubert C. Pontius, former judge and an active participant in the prosecution of conspirators against Don R. Mellett, slain editor, was expressed by police today. Maxwell lives at 806 Twelfth street N. E. Judge Pontius' address is 806 Twelfth street N. W.

Mr. Pontius received a number of warnings during the long investigation of the Mellett case, and for a time guards were maintained at his home.

MARSHAL'S POWER IS QUESTIONED BY QUINCY

The right of State Fire Marshal George C. Neal to grant an application of Edward J. Sandberg, Jr., for the erection of a gasoline filling station in Quincy, after it had been twice turned down by the licensing board, was questioned today at a hearing before Alfred F. Foote, commissioner of public safety.

It was City Clerk Crane of Quincy who questioned the fire marshal's authority.

Hanson to Play 'Helen of Troy'; Peace in Eden

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 1.—Neither history nor mythology gives us any more romantic figure than Paris. He is the man with whom Helen of Troy eloped and kept a war going for ten long years. Lars Hanson, the stalwart Viking, whose year in America has been highly successful, will give his idea of Paris in the movies.

Maria Korda, the statuesque Hungarian actress, will play Helen, while Lewis Stone draws the role of Menelaus, the deserted husband in First National's version of "Helen of Troy."

I have no idea that Alexander Korda will attempt to really picturize John Erskine's book, which was purchased by First National. I don't believe it can be done. Satire of that type is not screenable. Some of the scintillating lines, however, can be used for titles.

The first Chester Conklin-W. C. Fields starring comedy is to be a circus comedy. Fields played a prominent part in "Sally of the Circus" and really won his starring contract with Famous Players-Lasky on the strength of his work as Poop opposite Carol Dempster.

Fields is not the type who can carry a comedy through alone. He needs good support. Conklin is always funny. Richard Arlen will have the romantic lead in the first Conklin-Fields comedy and Mary Brian the feminine lead.

Whatever troubles there were on "The Garden of Eden" have evidently been ironed out. At least Joseph Schenck has asked me to deny that any unpleasantness exists. The picture goes into production August 15, with Lewis Milestone directing, and, according to all concerned, everything is peace and harmony at United Artists now.

The theatrical season will see Jesse Lasky in the front seat looking for new faces and new plays. Mr. Lasky, who has gone to New York, made that statement himself. Certainly that doesn't sound like retrenchment will be in any way fatal to the movies.

It does not sound, however, as if Famous is on the lookout for something new for pictures.

There is a real collegiate atmosphere on Marion Davies' set. Not only because there are a number of college boys and girls, but because everyone has entered into the spirit of making "The Fair Co-ed" a real college picture.

The sweat shirt and white duck trousers Marion wears in her athletic scenes are the replica of those actually worn by a college girl in field events at Berkeley. Jane Winton has joined the cast.

DOG NEEDS PLAYGROUND, 3 SISTERS SCORN BIG BID

New York, Aug. 1 (AP)—Fifth avenue in its march of progress again has stubbed its toe against the forbidding garden wall of the silent old Wendel mansion at 39th street.

A reputed offer of $1,500,000 for the four-story brick building, owned by three elderly sisters whose combined wealth is estimated at close to $100,000,000, has been rejected, as have been many offers.

Refusal to sell is attributed to an eccentric brother, John G. Wendell, in whose former old-fashioned office there still hangs a sign, "No property for sale," which he posted as a warning to visiting relatives, and who is believed at his death in 1915 to have left an admonition never to sell.

The house has a walled-in yard which, unlike most New York yards, lies in front rather than in back of the building. There Miss Ella Wendel, the only sister still able to be about, takes walks after nightfall, and there her small dog is exercised.

Within the mansion there is neither electric light, telephone, dumb waiter nor other modern convenince. No newspapers or magazines are delivered there. None of the sisters is said to have ever ridden in an automobile, an elevator or to have used a telephone.

Their real estate holdings in New York are said to be second only to those of the Astor estate.

TWO GIRLS SEEK BRIGHT LIGHTS

Fired with the possibility of a stage career, two young Watertown girls have disappeared from their homes and their parents have asked the police to hunt for them among the white lights of New York's Broadway. The girls are Josephine Zuppa, seventeen, of Forest street, and Sarah Ilacqua, fifteen, of Middle street.

NEW DATA IN DEATH CASE SENT TO JUSTICE BRANDEIS

Jersey City, Aug. 1 (A.P.).—Alexander Simpson, chief of counsel for Salvatore Merra, awaiting execution in Trenton this week for slaying a public service paymaster in Newark, today forwarded to United States Justice Brandeis at Chatham, Mass., additional records in the case.

Simpson said Justice Brandeis had assured him in denying the application Saturday for a writ to review the case that he (Brandeis) would be willing to receive additional data and if he felt the occasion warranted, act favorably on the petition reversing Saturday's adverse decision.

VANDERBILT TAKES UP RESIDENCE IN RENO

Reno, Nev., Aug. 1 (A.P.)—Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., former publisher of tabloid newspapers, plans to make his home in Reno for three months, he said here today. Three months is the length of residence required prior to filing a divorce here. His attorney intimated Vanderbilt would file divorce papers against Rachel Littleton Vanderbilt.

Vanderbilt said he and Mrs. Vanderbilt had been separated for three years and reiterated that his wife had refused to seek a divorce and probably he would be forced to do so.

ITALY WON'T CONSENT TO GERMAN-AUSTRIAN PACT

Rome, Aug. 1 (I.N.S.)—"Italy has never had any intention of interfering with internal affairs in Austria," Premier Mussolini declared before the cabinet today. "Italy has never concentrated troops on the Austrian border."

"The Vienna revolt has revived talk regarding the Austrian problem and some suggestions of a solution being found through a Danubian federation or an 'anschluss' with Germany. Both of these solutions are irreconcilable with the Versailles and St. Germaine treaties. Italy has not modified her attitude on such unions."

"GAS" UP AGAIN AFTER WAR IN SPRINGFIELD

Springfield, July 1 (A.P.).—Gasoline prices, which for two weeks have been involved in a city-wide filling station "war" that has made it possible for motorists to obtain fuel as low as 11 cents a gallon, were back at normal 18 cents today, when owners that have been leaders in the cutting decided to abandon their course.

The war originated in the lowering of the week-end price concessions by a few dealers.

Rhode Island Auto Victim Dies

Woonsocket, R. I., Aug. 1 (A.P.).—Henry Beauregarde, thirty-six, who suffered a fractured skull Thursday night when his automobile crashed into another, died today.

tomobile, in which he daily drives in the Vatican garden, the first that any Pope has owned. Every young "Go-getter" automobile salesman hearing that, will plan a trip to Rome. But, too, late. The Pope will buy an Italian automobile made at Milan.

It is pathetic to think of a man like the Pope, overburdened with care and responsibilities held within the walls of the Vatican gardens, even though it be by his own will.

However, the flying machine is here, and in a few years will be safer than any automobile, because it uses a wider road.

Soon, if he chooses, the Pope, in a ship of the air, will be able to leave his beautiful gardens and fly to his beloved mountain tops. He was famous as a climber of the Alps before he voluntarily immersed himself in the Vatican.

The whole world will be open to him, and it will not be necessary for him, seemingly, to acquiesce in his loss of "temporal power" by crossing ancient Pontifical lands now ruled by those to whom Garibaldi gave control of Italy.

All told 24,000,000 automobiles are in use in fifty-nine countries of the earth. The United States owns 20,000,000 of the 24,000,000. The United States Commerce Department gives the figures. We have one automobile for every six persons, Hawaii one to eleven, Canada one to thirteen, Afghanistan has one to 1,200,000. Poor Afghanistan, happy America. To have a motor is to defy the law of gravitation, and be a free man.

America's millions who imagine they are thirsty for light wine, beer or something stronger, will be interested in this.

United States capital has recently lent nearly $300,000,000 to help foreign countries develop their liquor and beer business. Even in the far East this country has financed liquor production to the tune of more than $5,-000,000. Meanwhile, the nation buys its alcohol from bootleggers and poisons itself slowly, or sometimes, rapidly.

BENT BLADE HALTS TRY FOR SEAPLANE RECORD

New York, Aug. 1 (I.N.S.).—The attempt of Lieutenant Alford Williams to break the world's seaplane record of 258.8 miles an hour, scheduled for today, has been postponed because of an unusual accident to the plane. One of the fine duralumin blades of the propeller was bent by a vortex of water whirled up when the motor was started yesterday.

The delay in starting may be for several days, since the most trifling departure from perfect alignment of the propeller blades would interfere with the speed of the ship and might defeat the attempt to fly at 300 miles an hour, the ultimate hope of Lieutenant Williams.

U. S. SPEAKERS LACKING, SAYS WILLIAMS

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.
Editor of Universal Service

Williamstown, Aug 1.—Conspicuous by its absence from the sessions of the Williamstown Institute of Politics in years past has been the distinctively American point of view in the discussion of questions on the agenda.

Distinguished representatives from foreign countries have been glad to give the prevailing point of view of their respective peoples and have doubtless expected to find here exponents of the prevailing American point of view on questions which Americans were assigned to elucidate.

Instead of that the American voices raised have generally been voices of minorities. If this year's session is to prove an exception to this rule evidence of the change has yet to appear.

Take the Philippines as an example: The prevailing American opinion in regard to the Philippines has yet to be expressed to the Institute in any comprehensive or authoritative way. Chief Justice Taft is not here, Governor General Wood is not here. The Secretary of War, the chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, prominent members of the Senate and House committee on insular affairs—all are conspicuous by their absence.

And there is no one among the list of speakers yet announced who can be regarded as qualified, much less authorized to present to the institute a survey of conditions in the islands and the program for their immediate future from the distinctively American point of view.

In fact, there appears to be a preference to discuss the theories of minorities regarding the long distance future of the Philippines, instead of a fearlessness of actualities in the Philippines present and probabilities in the near future of the Philippines.

If the institute is to grow in influence upon American public opinion, if it is to be recognized abroad as a place where there is a turning up of salient facts and a full and frank exchange of worth-while opinions—a fact finding factory for the promotion of honest and sincere discussion, there must be heard, occasionally at least, a voice of the great American majority, especially in the discussion of American questions.

The attendance this year is not large—less than 200 regular members, among whom the female of the species outnumbers the male.

"Eyes Straight Ahead," If You Want to Go to Camp, Next Year

By his declaration at Camp Devens on Thursday that when his 12-year-old son has reached the proper age he will go to one of the Citizens' Military Training camps, Governor Fuller showed himself to be a wise and discerning father.

The military training camp idea has sold itself to the American people. No longer is it the subject of controversy worthy of the name.

Students at these camps, youths ranging in age from 17 to 21, live an orderly and well-regulated life, get wholesome food and healthful exercise.

Essentially for military training, the camps are schools of instruction in physical culture and CITIZENSHIP. This year, emphasis has been placed upon military gymnastics, drills, parades and athletic events. In practically every case the physical condition of the boy will be better when he leaves camp than it was when he entered.

Colonel Pierpont Stackpole and his associates of the Military Training Camps Association have reason to feel proud of their success in helping to build up a favorable New England sentiment. It is no longer necessary to beat the drum in order to attract and interest prospective students. Throughout the country this year there were more than 50,000 applicants for 35,000 places.

Fifteen thousand American boys, every bit as deserving as the more fortunate who have been Uncle Sam's guests for 30 days, were disappointed simply because the hospitality of the Government could go no further.

If this condition were to be continued, Alvan T. Fuller, Jr., will have reason to be thankful, in 1932, that his far-seeing father was wise enough to put him up for membership in 1927.

It ought not to be continued. The training camp movement should be extended as far as it will go. If it is wise to make better citizens of 35,000 young men, by this method of vacation training, then it certainly will be wise to increase the opportunity.

The next Congress should increase the scope of the citizens' military training movement.

And not only that, but should provide training camps for girls.

Fine Animals, BUT---

What Chance Has a Child Against Them?

THIS LADY BREEDS DANISH BOAR HOUNDS.

The charming person in the background, who raises dogs for amusement, and perhaps profit, displays here four samples of her "Great Danes." These dogs, originally from Denmark, were used to hunt the wolf and the wild boar. They are so powerful that one could hold a wild boar by the bristles while the huntsman rode up and ran his spear into the animal's shoulder. At hunting wild boars and wolves these dogs were useful. But around in crowded civilization they present a problem that eventually civilization will have to solve.

Every little boy seeing this will say: "I wish I had one of those dogs. I would ride on his back and hitch him up and frighten everybody."

But a mother with young children seeing such an animal at large is filled with terror. Mothers who see this picture will be glad to know that the lady who raises these dogs lives in England.

One of the most preposterous laws ever made says, according to judicial decisions, that "every dog is entitled to one bite." In other words, if you can't prove that a dog has previously bitten human beings you have no claim against the dog's master.

The master is not supposed to know that his dog would bite.

It ought to be his business to know, and every man should be responsible for his dog, exactly as he would be for his own act. To say that every dog is entitled to one bite is like saying that every owner of a pistol is entitled to one shot. How could he know that his bullet would hurt anybody, until he had tried?

Dogs are in the right place, far from cities. Their place is not where they frighten children and worry mothers. Such monsters as this, and such dangerous animals as the treacherous, never safe, POLICE DOG, should never be allowed outside a high fence, on their own premises, unless muzzled and held in leash.

This will not please dog fanciers, commercial or otherwise. But the safety of children, and the peace of mind of mothers is more important than anybody's love for a modified wolf.

P. S.—Save yourself the trouble of writing to the editor, telling about the lovely dog you know that wouldn't bite anybody, and especially do not write letters saying that "police dogs" are harmless. Not one of them is safe, either for strangers or his owner.

AUTO "SATURATION" NOT HERE YET

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE growth of the automobile industry in the United States and all over the world has been remarkable. It is probably the outstanding business of the age in the matter of rapid development.

Has it reached its limit? Has the "saturation" point been arrived at?

According to the general manager of one of the distributors for Southern California it has not.

He says that any man who lives in any of our great cities, such as New York, Los Angeles or San Francisco, might think that the streets were about full enough of automobiles and that they could not get any fuller. The problem of street traffic is very serious.

But he adds that we must remember that but twelve per cent. of all the registered vehicles in the United States are in cities of five hundred thousand or more, and fifty-five per cent. of the country people's registered motor cars are in cities of ten thousand and less. Our road-building program continues at a rapid pace. The Federal-aid to transcontinental highways extending from Canada to Mexico is doing much to help good roads.

The annual replacement market is growing, as more than 1,500,000 motor vehicles were scrapped last year.

Also the export market is growing. People all over the world are recognizing that in proportion as they own and operate motor cars their country progresses economically and socially.

Of course there are tariff barriers against American cars, but people of other countries recognize that the automobile contributes materially to their prosperity, and this serves as a check upon unreasonable tariffs.

There were almost 5,000,000 motor trucks and cars produced in the United States last year and the number of registered vehicles was over 22,000,000. The prospect for 1927 is very bright. It will probably be better than 1926.

My informant says that the American people have become absolutely dependent upon the motor car, and that he believes that within the next ten years we will see 30,000,000 passenger cars on our streets and highways.

EVERY Summer the great temporary exodus to Europe brings millions of dollars to American and foreign business. From Boston, European trippers do not go in great numbers. But Boston port sends many ships to Canada, Newfoundland and the West Indies.

Old seafaring men who may have been brought up on three masters and square riggers work on these ships. What their thoughts are when they see linen-knickered passengers we cannot know.

* * *

Along Atlantic avenue and near City square and Summer street extension are the gathering places for the vacationers-by-sea. Besides the travelers, many, many shoe polish boys and taxi-drivers gather.

* * *

What a contrast exists between the little white-trousered man who springs out of a cab with about a dozen bags, and the tattered, motionless "flop" who stands by, hands in pocket, expressionless!

These people with more than one suit of clothes find all kinds of luggage accessories to purchase. Women lucky enough to receive invitations to a week-end can purchase fitted week-end cases. The case or bag consists of a small suitcase with a vanity compartment. The compartment comes in a variety of ways and contains ring pocket, shoe horn, comb, mirror, brushes, shoe hook, bottles, toothpaste holder, brooch holder and other necessities.

For the price of a good used car one can obtain a case of this sort.

We have heard those ostentatious folks who exclaim, "I'd love to go to Europe, but it's so much bother, what with customs, etc." One of the simplest ways to travel is to call the travel bureau and let them do the work. After telephoning one can start for Egypt or San Francisco without further ado.

Such people are the aristocrats, however. The young man who marries and needs a lengthy wedding tour can do as the Cambridge young man did. One hundred dollars fitted up a good flivver with all camping accessories. In three months he and she (the wife) had covered Canada, Mexico and most of the United States.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

PROFESSOR WILLIAM McDOUGALL, famous psychologist of Harvard University, thinks that we Americans have gone a little crazy on the subject of sex.

Here is a country in which sex distinctions have been abolished — theoretically. Ladies vote and serve in Congress, peddle bonds and real estate, set up barber shops and paint church steeples, cut their hair and shave their necks, establish world records in swimming and hitch-hike across the continent clad in their brothers' panties. Sex, under these conditions, would seem to be as common as carrots and just about as exciting.

But far from it. Never has the human race been so a-twitter with naughty speculation. We all act as if we were peeking through our first key hole.

For years we've had nothing but Pretty Girls on every magazine cover. Personally I'd welcome a tasty reproduction of a dish of stewed tripe with loud yelps of joy. Or a good etching of a nice respectable kitchen stove. Anything for a change.

Then there are the movies, with lovely ladies, madly pursued, dragging their Fatal Beauty through every film.

In case this proves too tame, you can find cozy domestic scenes from our Better Bagnios, making record runs on the legitimate stage.

For your quiet hours, popular fiction reeks with every detail of Things a Young Girl Shouldn't Know. Most of them make the Medical Journal look like the work of a bungling amateur.

Yes, we're certainly playing sex overtime. The dear old African jungle was never like this! And Professor McDougall, newly returned from cool, conservative China, says we make him sick. Not in those rough words, of course, but that's the point.

"Everybody thinks about sex," he protests. "Every writer writes about it and about little else. Sex plays are the chief drawing card on stage and screen. Girls think they must be vampires and boys suppose they are expected to make strenuous love."

This is partly the inevitable reaction from the prim old days when legs were limbs and ceased six inches from the ankle, and all well-bred babies came from cabbage patches. Naturally after a period like that, we all want to sneak out and write naughty words on the barn door.

That's one reason for our sex epidemic. Professor McDougall also thinks that much of our more select smut hails from Vienna in the guise of Freudian psychology. According to Professor Freud, if you feel a sudden yearning for a hot dog sandwich it's because you're repressing a hopeless passion for your mother's maiden aunt. This is known as libido. Which may be the way mother's maiden aunts affect folks back in Vienna, but it certainly isn't the psychology for this country where we have a lot of nice, breezy outdoor sport which puts it all over on libido.

So, take it by and large, it's high time for some wise man like Professor William McDougall to arise and yell "NIX ON SEX!" And I, for one could weep with gratitude.
